THE SYDNEY MORNING HERALD of December 12th, 1888, says:—
"Mr. C. E. Crampton, of York-street, has a special feature in the Holstein Piano, to which is attached the 'Sordino' stop. For these instruments Mr. Crampton is the sole agent in Sydney. The stop completely regulates the instrument, and will enable the player to enjoy the full harmonies of whatever piece may be under execution, while the tone is so subdued as to be inaudible to those who may be occupying an adjoining room. This invention, it will at once be seen, is a guarantee against the torture of the eternal 'exercises,' of which complaint is so often made by the nervous and the musically unsympathetic. The instrument can, in fact, be made completely noiseless, while full action of the keyboard remains for practice. Mr. Crampton has on view a number of very fine instruments."

NEWS BY THE MAIL.

OUR LONDON LETTER.

LONDON, MAY 24.

The most pressing matter which is engaging the attention of the Government is the Lord Lieutenancy of Ireland. There is a very strong demand amongst all sections of Unionists that the post should be extinguished, that the Chief Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant should be made a Minister of State, that a royal residence should be established in Ireland, and a distinct understanding obtained from the Queen that either herself or some influential member of the Royal Family shall visit the country at regular intervals and keep up a royal court there. The Government are disposed to yield to this request, and there is authority for stating that the Queen is inclined to look more favourably than she has hitherto done upon the suggestion that Ireland should enjoy the light of the Royal countenance to a greater extent than she has yet had an opportunity of doing. The Prince of Wales is known to be strongly impressed with the conviction that Ireland ought to receive a fair share of the Royal presence, and, had he been allowed to carry out his own ideas, he would have lived in that country as much as he has done in Scotland. Ministers, however, are in the difficulty that they cannot abolish the Viceroyalty without a special Act of Parliament, and it is too late to ask for this during the present session. There have been rumours of their calling Parliament together again in the autumn to sanction the proposed change; but it may be safely asserted that it will need something more important than the abolition of the Lord Lieutenancy of Ireland to induce them to take such an unpopular step as to summon an autumn session. Moreover, they are said to have resolved to deal with the subject in a comprehensive way when they bring forward their extended scheme of local government for Ireland, so that they would not care to deal with the matter in a piecemeal fashion. There are said to be constitutional objections to placing the Viceroyalty in commission, and it is, therefore, believed to be probable that Lord Londonderry will be induced to remain at his present post for another year, instead of retiring in the autumn, as he had proposed to do. If the noble marquis cannot be persuaded to do this, Ministers will be in a fix. They have hawked the Lord Lieutenancy about pretty well all through the peerage, and no noble lord can be found to accept it, so that it looks as though, if the Government did not abolish it, the office would abolish itself. The proposal to extinguish it is likely to meet with opposition from the Gladstonian and Irish Home Rulers, and this, in part, explains the reluctance of the Government to introduce a measure to sweep it away at this late period of the session. It will be recollected that the Viceroy of Ireland was made an important personage in Mr. Gladstone's Home Rule Bill of 1886, and the Home Rulers are therefore unwilling to see it abolished. In the event of it being done away with the £20,000 now voted as the Viceroy's salary would be utilised towards the expense of keeping up the royal residence, and the officers attached to the Viceregal Court would form the nucleus of a real, and not a sham, royal household.

The annual general meeting of the Imperial Federation League yesterday was attended by what might be described as a small but influential gathering—that is, there were plenty of gentlemen present whose names carry weight with the British public, although the total attendance in point of numbers was small. The report, which was a lengthy one, claimed for the league the credit of the Colonial Conference of 1887, the effect of which, it declared, was making itself felt in direct practical steps towards the federation of the Empire, in greatly-increased public interest in the objects of the league, and in urgent demands on the part of many of its members, and chiefly those in the colonies, for a further definition of those objects, and the adoption of a more active policy. It noted that the agreement concluded at that conference, by which the Australasian colonies assumed a share in the maritime defence of the Empire, had been formally ratified by the Parliaments of those countries with only one exception; and that the passage of the Act was, in more than one instance, the occasion of a demonstration indicating an appreciation of the step which had been taken. This action, it said, had been aptly described by the First Lord of the Treasury as the "spirit of federation." It called attention to the important step that had been taken in the opening of negotiations between the Dominion of Canada and the Australasian colonies for a conference with a view to the improvement of trade relations between those two countries, and to the development of means of closer communication. It expressed regret that, up to the present moment, an Imperial Federation League has not been formed in New South Wales, although not a few members of the parent body were residents in Sydney; and mourned the death of that "Australian statesman, the Right Hon. William Bede Dalley, whose action in connection with the New South Wales Contingent in the Soudan evoked so strongly the sentiment of Imperial unity." A resolution of regret and condolence was, said the report, despatched by the executive committee of the league to Sydney, and steps were being taken to provide in London a fitting memorial to the deceased statesman and Privy Councillor. In connection with this subject I may here say that at the close of his address Lord Rosebery stated that on that very morning he had waited on the Dean of St. Paul's and asked his consent, which was readily granted, to an application that the league should be allowed to affix on the walls of the Metropolitan Cathedral a tablet to Mr. Dalley's memory. The noble lord went on to say:—

"It is a step that some may call a small one, and some may sneer at it as a merely sentimental step. To me it is neither small nor merely sentimental, because if we wish to acknowledge the community of rights and honours to the living, we must equally acknowledge the community of rights and honours to the dead. We claim this as a right of every subject of the Empire who shall have earned it by his own distinction. We have by this act, and by the ready sanction of the Dean and Chapter, asserted and maintained the right of an Australian to be commemorated with Nelson, Wellington, Reynolds, and Johnson, and though his ashes cannot mix with theirs, future generations, I venture to say, on looking at that tablet, however unassuming it may be, will recognise that the right was there asserted, there acknowledged, and cannot be revoked by any subsequent act."

Lord Rosebery occupied the chair, and moved the adoption of the report. Lord Rosebery was not favourable to the drawing up of plans for Imperial Federation, and exporting them from this country to the colonies. But, if he did suggest any plan at all, it would be to send out on a visit to the colonies bodies of representative working-men, chosen from every part of the United Kingdom, who could traverse the colonies by the new route of Vancouver to Australia and back through India, so that they might see the real object at which the Imperial federationists were driving, what was the heritage for the preservation of which they strove, and what was our interest, direct or indirect, in that course. He thought that at the time when we were increasing our Navy to such an extent, one of our warships might well be spared for this purpose. Lord Carnarvon seconded the motion in his precise, lady-like tone of voice, enlarging upon the good example which Australia and New Zealand set to the mother-country in the splendid preparations they had made for their own defence, and upon the extent to which steam, the post, and the cable were knitting together the colonies and the mother-country. Sir John Colomb, one of the "auld lichts" of the Royal Colonial Institute, supported the motion with his usual dreamy eloquence, and it was carried unanimously. The next resolution was that expressing satisfaction at the practical advance which had been made during the past year towards the federation of the Empire by "the prompt action of the Legislatures of the great majority of the Australian colonies giving effect to the agreement arrived at by the Conference of 1887, to provide for the joint defence of the Empire's sea-borne commerce in the South Pacific, and to the important proposals made by the Dominion of Canada to the Australasian colonies for a conference upon the development of their trade relations, and the advancement of their mutual interests." This was moved by Sir Frederick Weld, seconded by Mr. H. O. Arnold Forster, son of the late Mr. W. E. Forster, and adopted. Mr. Forster made one important suggestion. He said that the United States Government were offering to take the members of the Canadian Parliament on a tour throughout the States, so as to show them the extent and resources of the American Republic. He, therefore, advised that the British Government should place at the disposal of the Canadian delegates to the Australian-Canadian conference one of our troop ships, and that they should be conveyed to Australia or the Cape, or wherever the conference was held, the longest way round, so as to pass through the whole extent of the British Empire, and thus enable them to see that that Empire possessed an extent of territory and a wealth of resources in no way inferior to those of the United States.

There is a rumour that we may shortly expect to hear of the betrothal of one of the daughters of the Prince of Wales.

ANGLO-AUSTRALIAN ITEMS.

Colonel Tulloch, who is to be the new commander-in-chief of the military forces in Victoria, has seen nearly 35 years' service in various parts of the British Empire. He is an infantry officer, but has been accustomed to work with all branches of the service, including the navy. In fact he was one of those who swam ashore from H.M.S. Invincible during the bombardment of Alexandria, and spiked the guns of the Mex fort. It appears that the Horse Guards are taking great interest in the Australian military forces, and are desirous of bringing them up to the highest pitch of efficiency.

Mr. Christie D. Murray expects to stay about four months in Australia. He thinks that will be quite long enough to enable him to use up all his experiences about which he is going to lecture, and has no desire to lag superfluous on the stage. He will lecture upon his experiences as a journalist, a war correspondent, and a novelist.

The Queensland Government have secured two first-class men for the head of their Railway Commission. Mr. John Mathieson (the Chief Commissioner) and Mr. Andrew Johnston, his colleague, have had abundance of experience in railway management. Mr. Mathieson has practically spent his life in the service of the Glasgow and South-Western Railway Company, having risen through all the grades to the post of superintendent of the line, to which he was appointed in 1875, and which he has held up to the present time. His railway experience covers a period of 28 years, during 13 of which he has represented the Glasgow and South-Western Railway Company at the Glasgow Clearing House. Mr. Johnston was, so to speak, born a railway man, being the son of the late engineer-in-chief of the Midland Railway Company. He has had 20 years' experience of railway management on various lines in the Kingdom. His latest appointment was that of engineer for the eastern division of the Great Eastern Railway, to which post he was nominated in 1881. Messrs. Mathieson and Johnston will sail for Brisbane in the Britannia on the 14th of next month.

The previous tenant of the house which General Boulanger is now occupying, 51, Portland-place, was Mr. D'Arcy, the Australian millionaire, and one of the owners of the Mount Morgan Mine.

On Monday the Tamar, a steel three-masted sailing ship, which has been built for Messrs. Devitt and Moore's Australian line of packets, was launched by Messrs. Napier, Shanks, and Bell, the builders. The Tamar is 287ft. long, 42½ft. broad, 25½ft. deep, is of 2000 tons register, and has a carrying capacity of about 3260 tons. On her voyage out to Sydney the Tamar will be commanded by Captain Brown.

LINNEAN SOCIETY OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

The monthly meeting of the Linnean Society of New South Wales was held at the Linnean Hall, Elizabeth Bay, last evening. The chair was occupied by Mr. R. Etheridge. There was a good attendance. Mr. C. M. Woodford (Sydney) was elected a member of the society.

The CHAIRMAN announced that the next excursion had been arranged for July 27, members to leave Redfern station for Clifton by the 9.10 a.m. train.

A number of donations from various societies were said to have been received during the last month.

Messrs. J. D. Cox and A. G. Hamilton, contributed "A list of the birds of the Mudgee district, with notes on their habits, &c." One hundred and ninety-four species were recorded as the result of a number of years' observations. The physical characteristics and vegetation of the district were said to be such as to allow, to some extent, of a commingling of species characteristic of the coastal regions, of the plains, and of the table-land.

Dr. OSCAR KATZ read a paper, in which he described some "Experimental Researches with the Microbes of Chicken Cholera." He gave an account of all the experimental investigations undertaken by him since last year. The greater portion of these experiments were made upon rabbits, birds (indigenous and domestic), hares, guinea-pigs, and ferrets. Many points in the life history of the chicken cholera bacteria were dealt with. Dr. Katz also exhibited specimens and drawings of the microbes.

Mr. T. W. E. DAVID read a "Note on the Origin of Kerosene Shale." After describing the known facts with reference to the occurrence of kerosene shale and its chemical composition, the author enumerated the various theories which had been already advanced to account for its origin in the following order:—1, the drift timber theory; 2, the distillation theory; 3, the oil-spring theory; and 4, the vegetable secretion theory; to which Mr. David added a fifth theory advanced by himself, that of the "spore or seed theory," which ascribed the origin of kerosene shale like that of the Tasmanite of the Mersey River coal-field in Tasmania to local accumulations of sporangia—spores or seeds. The author also cited as a parallel instance the so-called "sulphur showers" of pollen from the pine prevalent in pine forests in Scotland and Scandinavia, and which cover the surface of lakes occasionally to a thickness of half an inch. Kerosene shale might have had a similar origin from dusty spores or seeds blown into small lakes in the permo-carboniferous coal-swamps. The principal argument in favour of this theory was the constant presence of seed-like bodies or sporangia in portions of the kerosene shale and associated fireclay. Reference was made to the important recent observation of Mr. C. S. Wilkinson, F.G.S., that kerosene shale in New South Wales was exclusively confined to the lower coal measures or Greta series.

A paper (forwarded by the Rev. T. Blackburn), entitled "Revision of the genus Heteronyx," with descriptions of new species, part 3, was read. This dealt with 14 species, of which 13 were described as new, forming the second group of the third of the main divisions into which the author has proposed to divide the genus, comprising species having the summit of the labrum overtopping the plane of the clypeus, the antennæ nine-jointed, and the claws bifid. The rev. gentleman also contributed some "Notes on Australian Coleoptera, with descriptions of new species." Three genera and 33 species of coleoptera, from various parts of the continent, were described as new, while some additional particulars about a few species previously described were also recorded.

Mr. Thomas G. Sloane forwarded a short paper entitled "Studies in Australian Entomology, No. I.: Review of the genus Sartieus (Fam. Carabidæ)." The author reviewed the genus, giving a succinct diagnosis of the characters which distinguish it from closely allied genera among the Feronides, and added several new species.

Mr Sidney Oliff exhibited a community of wasps (Polistes sp.), from Drake, near Tenterfield. These wasps were recently obtained by Mr. C. S. Wilkinson. Mr. Oliff also showed a selection of insects, forming a portion of a large and interesting series from Mount Kosciusko, recently obtained on behalf of the Australian Museum by Mr. Helms, who was present, and offered some remarks with reference to the same. Mr. Rohu exhibited a collection of English plants, which he presented to the society's herbarium. Mr. David exhibited microscopic sections and specimens of kerosene shale in illustration of his paper. A collection of diptera was shown by Mr. Skuse.

TRADE MOVEMENTS.

A special summons meeting of all the branches of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners was held last evening, at the Protestant Hall, Castlereagh-street, Mr. J. Berry being the chairman. The committee of management presented the annual report and balance-sheet, which was adopted. Messrs. Beckwith, Wilkinson, and Kennedy were elected delegates to the eight hours' demonstration committee. Other business of a routine nature was also transacted.

The weekly meeting of the United Wharf Labourers' Society took place at the Maritime Hall, Sussex-street, last evening, under the presidency of Mr. T. Dunlop. A communication was received from the Orange branch of the Shearers' Union, requesting information in regard to affiliation. The secretary was instructed to write to the Newcastle Miners, conveying the sympathy of the society for those who have been afflicted by the recent disaster at the Glebe Colliery. The revision of the rules was deferred until next meeting.

PARLIAMENT OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 26.

The PRESIDENT took the chair at half-past 4 o'clock.

PAPERS.

Mr. W. H. SUTTOR laid upon the table:—Copy of of reduced telegraphic press rates between Eurowie and Purnamoota and South Australia; return in reference to guns at Steel Point Battery; return relative to the case of On Lee; correspondence relative to Cardinal Moran's charges regarding certain charitable institutions.

EVANS COMBINATION TRUCKS.

Mr. W. H. SUTTOR, in answer to Mr. Hoskins, said that 14 of the Evans combination trucks had been constructed, and were now in use on the railways of this colony. The Railway Commissioners considered that while theoretically there were advantages in the combination trucks, yet practically, in the every-day working of the railway, the advantages were far less than appeared on the surface, and were too costly to bring into general use. The sum of £16,000 had been paid to Mr. Evans and others, the Government having been committed to that sum by the previous Administration.

THE 25-TON GUNS.

Mr. W. H. SUTTOR, in answer to Mr. Creed, said it was a fact that one of the 25-ton guns emplaced for the defence of Port Jackson, was disabled during the Easter manoeuvres. The gun had not yet been completely repaired. It had to be dismounted and the whole of the machinery examined. It would require repair, and the pivot would have to be reset. It was impossible to give an opinion as to the probable date of the gun being again placed in action until the damage had been overhauled and repaired by the Colonial Architect's Department. No reports were made by the officers in charge of the battery at the time, or by the officer commanding the Artillery relative to the cause of the accident.

COMPENSATION FOR MILITARY CLOTHING

Mr. W. H. SUTTOR, in answer to Mr. Creed, said that the gross amount which had been paid to the non-commissioned officers and privates of the Permanent Artillery in compensation for clothing, as shown at the late court-martial, not issued to them since 1st January, 1888, was £81 7s. 8d., being compensation to men on discharge. No compensation had been paid to the contractor since January 1, 1888.

MARRIED WOMEN'S PROPERTY BILL.

The Married Women's Property Bill was, on the motion of Mr. PIGOTT, read the third time and forwarded to the Legislative Assembly.

PAYMENT OF MEMBERS BILL.

Mr. SALOMONS moved that the Parliamentary Representatives Allowance Bill be now read the second time. The substance of the bill was contained in the second clause, the principal portion of which read:—"Every member of the Legislative Assembly shall be entitled to receive, by way of reimbursement for expenses incurred by him in the discharge of his Parliamentary duties, an allowance at the rate of £300 per annum." He would venture to remind the House before addressing himself in any way to the merits of the measure, that this was, he believed, the third time that a bill, which was in substance the same, had been sent up to this House from the Legislative Assembly. And he supposed he might assert that if it was desired that cordial relations should be preserved between the two Houses of the Legislature, it would at least receive calm and deliberate attention. It was to be borne in mind that many members of both Houses—and he believed what he was about to say applied to distinguished members of the House of Commons—who were opposed to the principle had since thought fit to vote for payment of members. Therefore he did not despair of seeing to-day, or whenever the division might take place, that a large number of members had reconsidered the views which they gave expression to some years back, and they would now vote in favour of the measure. Now was it wrong for him to say in the first instance that it was not to be lost sight of—unless we had a monopoly of political wisdom? This bill was the substance of the law of nearly every country in the world, except England; but in regard to England it must be borne in mind that there was a large body of educated and wealthy persons whose services were and had been during all past time available for legislative work; but in a country like this, similar in some respects and in circumstances to America, we could not find persons peculiarly adapted to that work in number sufficient to represent the various districts of the colony. So that in the first instance it seemed to him that hon. members ought to well consider that this was a bill that had three times passed the Legislative Assembly; and, further, that it was the law that had been found advisable in almost every civilised country except England—England being in a peculiar position, and perhaps the richest country in the world. Now, apart altogether from those considerations, it seemed to him that an unassailable position could be established for the bill and the principle embodied in it. Sir Henry Parkes had said:—"It is necessary, in a deliberative body like this, to collect—and it can only be done by a process of election such as that which returns members to this House—not so much gentlemen of education or accomplishments, or of large property, but men acquainted with the peculiarities of every portion of the country—gentlemen who have had local knowledge, which cannot be picked up in theory or by any possible means except residence in the country districts, and it is necessary to collect persons who view these various matters from the most opposite points of view. That can only be done by getting into this Assembly those striking local characters who always acquire a position wherever they are situated from the force of their personal character." Now, could not any person see that it necessarily and inevitably arose, unless responsible government was to be a mockery, that there must be payment of members. For these reasons—First of all look at the circumstances of this country. Many of the constituencies were far removed from the capital: the sittings of Parliament took place in Sydney: the labour of Parliament was serious and protracted: the expense of living in Sydney was a matter of great moment—that was to say it was not a light amount. It must be allowed that, according to the theory of our Constitution, if a a person be chosen by an electorate there ought to be no barrier standing in the way of that man representing that constituency. Supposing that a man of independent means, but not of such large means as would enable him to live for a long time in Sydney—a man who was familiar with the circumstances of an electorate—was unanimously elected, he asked this House how could it be said that we had the logical results of universal suffrage if that man when he came down to Sydney was to be driven to some corrupt and dishonourable course. It seemed to him that those reasons brought the law into force. The present state of things amounted to this; that either a constituency was not allowed to return the member it would choose, or it must find a means of maintaining him, which would be more disastrous than anything proposed in the bill. Surely countries like America, France, and Germany had as much sagacity as we had. He had been opposed to a measure of that kind, but after serious reflection and considering the views of those who favoured it, he had changed his opinion. The candidate having to incur very large expense had also to be considered. To the best of his judgment no exception could possibly be taken to the position that it was desirable the representative should, other things being equal, be a resident of the district he represented. He supposed hon. members knew that in every State in America it was either the law or custom that the representatives were residents of the districts they represented. In those States where that was not the law it was a practice as strong as the law; and the reason was this: If you wanted to gather into one focus the views of the colony you must bring together people familiar with the various districts. If the country did not find money to defray reasonable expenses a constituency was necessarily driven to do what? Either send to Sydney for what was known as a land agent, with a seat in Parliament—a most undesirable and dangerous position, and objectionable on many grounds—or bound to pick out some person resident in Sydney who would have some interest outside the constituency. In England there was the inducement to those who sacrificed their time and their interests in public work of rewards which were far beyond any money reward; but those rewards could not be given here. The inducement in England was to be found in honours flowing from the Crown, and the high estimation in which public men were held. Unfortunately, in this country, by reason of the underrating of the position of a member of Parliament—a position which ought to be most honourable and respected—we ourselves had brought about a state of things which led to the view being taken by some people that the position of a member of either House was not commensurate with its dignities. As to the contention that men would be found to fulfil that duty as a matter of honour without any remuneration, they would find that with regard to the highest position in the world—that of a minister of religion—no Church was able to find a sufficient number of members to fill it without some monetary reward. If they relied upon finding men who were willing to make that heroic sacrifice they must be disappointed. It was possible that the bill would bring into existence professional politicians, but he did not fear the creation of a class of men who would devote themselves entirely to public life. As bearing upon this point he quoted from a speech delivered by the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, in the course of which that gentleman said that he should like to know why the politician's was the only business which might be left to amateurs—why the great interests of the State should be committed to men who undertook to deal with them as a distraction and as a distinction, but did not make it the serious business of their lives. Now, that was the view he held as to what were called professional politicians. It might be advisable that a measure of that kind should be limited in its operation to a certain number of years, because otherwise it might be found difficult to repeal it should that be found desirable.

Dr. GARRAN had no intention to go into the merits of the bill. Were he a member of an elective House he would vote against the bill, but as a member of a nominee House, and looking to the fact that, with regard to momentous questions, the Upper House, after reasonable delay, had always bowed to the expressed will of the people, and seeing that a majority of electors had adopted the principle of payment of members, he thought it was his duty not to oppose the measure. There was only one method of expressing public opinion, and if they arrived at that method of expressing public opinion, there was only one conclusion at which they could arrive. Ever since that question had been discussed amongst the people, there had been at every successive election an increasing majority of members in favour of payment of members. That result led up to one conclusion, and one conclusion only. They might go outside the constitution if they liked, and establish new contrivances; but so long as they took the constitution as it stood, they should be influenced by the voice of the people. This House had resisted the Payment of Members Bill up to the present time, and it had acted wisely, and been duly carrying out the purpose for which it was constituted in giving the people time to think over the question, and read over what the press had to say upon it. The result of that was an increasing popular force behind the bill. If they had passed the bill last session, they would have passed it with less warrant from the constituencies than they had now. He disapproved altogether of a plebiscite being taken on that question, but thought that payment of members should be accompanied by some system for the reduction of the number of members. It seemed that the will of the people could only be carried out by some reduction in the number of members. He did not consider that he was under any obligation to vote for the bill. It would be sufficient for him not to vote against it. He would allow the bill to be carried by the votes of those who could conscientiously vote upon it.

Mr. BUCHANAN intended to vote for the second reading of the bill, but hoped to see it amended in committee in the direction indicated by the last speaker. He submitted that the principle of payment of members was already in existence in this colony. He perfectly agreed with the constitutional position taken up by Dr. Garran. Now he must say, nevertheless, that the bill came up to the House in a very questionable shape. He did not know that any language could be too strong to condemn the infamy of a Government which, consisting of eight out of ten opposed to the principle, had sent up the bill so that they might make their seats secure. He did not think corruption had ever fastened so great a stain upon the character of public men as had been fastened on the Assembly by the bill. He had given notice of an amendment that the bill should not come into operation until the Assembly was reduced to 80 or fewer than 80 members. If the House of Commons was constituted on the same basis as our Assembly it would consist of 4800 members. If the Assembly was reduced to 80 members that would be equivalent to 3200 members in the House of Commons. The numbers in the Assembly had become so great that they were stultifying the whole course of legislation, and bringing ruin to the country; 50 members representing the people would do infinitely better work than 137. Surely the number might be reduced to 80. That would be large enough to represent a million of people.

Mr. JACOB took exception to the doctrine laid down by Dr. Garran, as to the constitutional aspect of the question. If this House considered it desirable that, in the best interests of the people, a certain bill should not pass, then the House had a duty to perform. He should vote against the second reading of the bill, which had come to them unconstitutionally. It was distinctly laid down by "May" that no member had any right to vote for any question in which he had a direct personal interest. He, for one, was not going to be frightened into giving his vote for the bill. (Cheers.) If a crisis were brought about he should be prepared to do his duty. He would not be influenced by the threats which had been made, and he hoped other members would not be influenced by them. If a crisis came it seemed to be the intention to tack this bill on to the Appropriation Bill. Well, if that were done he would vote for it being struck off the bill. Now, the country could not afford to pass the Payment of Members Bill. If the bill came before them with the proposition to pay the Council he would be just as much against it as he was at present. It was selfish on the part of the Assembly to propose to pay themselves and not the Council. One of his greatest objections to the bill was the attitude of the Government. There were eight out of ten of the Government against that measure, and yet it came before them as a Government measure. If an amendment for the reduction of the number of members to 80 were introduced in committee it would be tantamount to throwing out the bill. The Premier, instead of taking up the attitude he had, should have said that he was against the bill, and, should the House pass the measure, he would advise the Governor to dissolve Parliament. Rather than lose their positions as Ministers the members of the Administration had sent the bill up to this House. He highly applauded the Vice-President of the Executive Council in refusing to promote the bill. It would be found that the effect of the bill would be to cause certain members to support any existing Government rather than do anything that would bring about a dissolution. It was proposed to pay the ornamental members—of whom there were some—who came to the Assembly once in six months just as much as those who regularly attended to their Legislative duties. He quoted from a speech delivered some time ago by Mr. Salomons, in which that gentleman urged that the reduction of the number of members of the Assembly to 100 should be a condition precedent to the adoption of a similar measure.

Mr. SALOMONS: Hear, hear. I am of the same opinion still.

Mr. JACOB said that if he could be sure the country was in favour of payment of members he would vote for the bill. The only way he would be satisfied was by the question being relegated to the constituencies in some way or other. He did not like the bill, but he would vote against the second reading of it. The Ministry should have resisted the bill and gone to the country upon it.

Sir ALFRED STEPHEN was in favour of the principle of the bill, and would vote for the second reading of it.

Mr. JOSEPH had been always in opposition to payment of members. It should be an honourable ambition for a man to give his services to his country without any desire for payment. He considered, however, that there had been an expression of opinion from the people in favour of the measure, and that it was his duty to succumb to the wish of the people in that respect. He was, nevertheless, not in favour of the bill as it was now presented to them. He would like to see it amended in such a way as to defer its operation until after the next general election, and would move amendments with a view to securing that object.

Mr. COX said that after there had been an unmistakable expression of opinion on the part of the people in favour of payment of members he would put aside his own opinions and vote in favour of a measure to give effect to their views. He had not yet seen that the country had had an opportunity of expressing itself upon the measure.

Sir WILLIAM MANNING did not think that they need fear any of the threats that had been made, whether they came from without or within. He thought that the bill should not apply to the present Assembly. As to what had transpired in reference to the bill, he paid very little attention to the division taken elsewhere, because 42 members voted against their own interests and 72 for putting money into their own pockets. They had not had anything like an expression of public opinion on the measure, but on the other hand there had been no evidence that the people were decidedly opposed to it. Therefore, on the whole, they might take it that the voice of the public was in favour of the measure. He did not think that they could support the principle of the bill and at the same time say they would apply it to a reduction in the number of members. It was not right that Parliament should consent to the measure being applied to the present Parliament, because one of the principal reasons advanced in favour of the bill was that its enactment would result in better members coming forward than was now the case. He would support the second reading of the measure.

Mr. HOSKINS denied that payment of members was a principle; it was a question of expediency. He was not prepared to vote £300 a-year to gentlemen who voluntarily came forward to represent the country, and yet despite the fact that the finances were £2,600,000 in arrear had not done anything to improve the state of the Treasury. To be honest we could not afford to pay the £40,000 a-year. Even if the number of members were reduced to 80 he doubted whether he would support the measure, because an abundance of candidates always came forward. This was a most indecent bill. It proposed to give the members of the present Parliament retrospective payment.

Mr. O'CONNOR intended to vote for the bill. He would be no party to passing any amendment which would have the effect of defeating the measure. They were constrained to bow to the opinion of the country and pass the measure. He dissented from the part of the bill which made it apply to the present Parliament. He would vote for an amendment to make the bill applicable to the next ensuing session of Parliament. He would like to see a provision embodied to make the bill tentative and apply only to two Parliaments.

On the motion of Mr. LACKEY the debate was then adjourned, and its resumption made an Order of the Day for Wednesday next.

TEMPORARY SUPPLY BILL.

The Temporary Supply Bill, which was received from the Legislative Assembly, was read the first time.

The House, at 22 minutes past 9, adjourned until 4 o'clock on Thursday.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 26.

The SPEAKER took the chair at half-past 4 o'clock.

PERSONATION AT THE CENTRAL CUMBERLAND ELECTION.

Mr. SPEAKER informed the House that the Clerk had received a summons to attend a personation case at the Parramatta Police Court, and produce the writ for the election of a member for Central Cumberland. It was necessary that the leave of the House should be given.

Leave was accordingly given.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.

Mr. BRUNKER, in reply to Mr. Chanter, said the plan of the road between Deniliquin and Maud had but recently been received. It was now under examination prior to proclamation of the intention of the Crown as to the opening of the road. No avoidable delay would take place in dealing with this matter.

Mr. M'MILLAN, in reply to Mr. Chanter, said that provision had been made in the Fire Brigades Act Amendment Bill to cover all costs, &c., incurred by the Deniliquin Fire Brigades Board in a recent action at law. The money would be paid as soon as the bill had been passed. Provision had been made in the new bill to remedy the defects in the existing law.

Mr. BRUNKER, in reply to Mr. William Stephen, said that trustees had been appointed by the Government for the reserve on the north shore of Botany Bay, commencing at the western boundary of Mr. Walsh's Bunnerong Estate, and extending for a distance of about 96 chains along the north shore of the bay to the north-western corner of the estate known as the Sir Joseph Banks' Hotel and grounds.

Mr. BRUCE SMITH, in reply to Mr. Clubb, said that the Commissioners had reported on the proposed railway to Longnose Point, Balmain. The report had not yet been considered, inasmuch as the lately-acquired purchase at Darling Harbour promised to afford all the accommodation required for the present.

Mr. BRUNKER, in reply to Mr. Crick, said that it was not a fact that the rates levied under the Stock Protection Act in the Bathurst sheep district for 1888 (the last year for which returns had been received by the Government) were as high as heretofore, and the rates of bonuses were not less than for 1887, and very little less than those of 1884, 1885, and 1886. The board made no return to the department of the rates of bonus for 1881, 1882, and 1883.

Mr. M'MILLAN, in reply to Mr. Dowel, said that the Railway Commissioners had issued a regulation allowing a rebate on season tickets (up to three in number) to firms doing a large business with the railway, the reduction being regulated by the amounts of business done, as per bylaw No. 2, published in the Gazette of 19th March last. Eight such passes had been granted.

ACTING CHAIRMAN OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. M'MILLAN moved,—"That, with the concurrence of the House, Mr. Jacob Garrard should act as Chairman of Committees, for this day only."

The motion was agreed to.

WHARFS ON THE NORTHERN RIVERS.

Mr. EWING asked the Treasurer if it were true that some steps were being taken to lease the wharfs on the Northern rivers.

Mr. M'MILLAN said he found that a very large number of wharfs belonging to the Government were yielding no revenue, and what had been done in one case would be done in all cases. He was simply acting in the public interest.

Mr. EWING asked if the Minister would wait for an expression of opinion on the matter before leasing them.

Mr. M'MILLAN: Certainly.

PETITIONS.

Mr. KIDD presented a petition from Mr. James Collins, praying that the Oakey Park Coal-mining Company's Bill should be referred to a Select Committee, and that he might be called to give evidence against the bill.

The petition was received.

Mr. WOODWARD presented a petition signed by 1650 residents of Wollongong and the district of Illawarra generally, praying that as the shipping facilities at the port of Wollongong were inadequate to the requirements, a local harbour trust should be established.

The petition was received.

WATER AND SEWERAGE BOARD OFFICES.

Mr. ALLEN pointed out that the citizens were greatly inconvenienced through the Water and Sewerage Board offices being at the extreme northern end of the city.

Mr. BRUCE SMITH, in reply, said that he had already had under consideration the question of erecting suitable premises for the board, but he had not been able to get a piece of land in a central place at a reasonable price.

A DECISION OF THE LAND COURT.

Mr. LYNE called the attention of the Minister of Lands to his decision given at the Land Appeal Court on Monday last, in the appeal of J. F. Herbertson against the decision of the local Land Board that he should pay to Isaac Reynolds half the value of the fences between the latter's conditional purchase and his conditional lease. He wished to know if the decision would affect cases previously dealt with.

Mr. GARRETT rose to a point of order. He said that the Minister in a Land Court was not the Minister at all, and should not be questioned in the House concerning his decisions in the Court.

Mr. SPEAKER said the point taken was one for the consideration of the Minister, who was only known in the House as Minister of Lands, but who, if he chose to answer these questions, was at liberty to do so.

Mr. BRUNKER said he was not able to give a reply. Having so many cases to deal with, it was impossible for him to say just now what actuated him in arriving at this decision. If the hon. member would kindly interview him at the Lands Office, he would give the information required to-morrow. (Hear, hear.)

MARRIED WOMEN'S PROPERTY BILL.

Mr. SPEAKER announced that he had received a message from the Legislative Council, forwarding the Married Women's Property Bill.

Mr. KIDD moved that the bill be read the first time.

The motion was agreed to.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE MR. SUTHERLAND.

Mr. M'MILLAN, for Sir Henry Parkes, moved,—"That this House, at its rising to-day, do adjourn until 7 o'clock p.m. to-morrow, to enable honourable members to attend the funeral of the late Hon. John Sutherland."

The motion was agreed to.

RYDE AND HUNTER'S HILL MUNICIPAL DISTRICTS BILL.

Mr. FARNELL moved,—"That leave be given to bring in a bill to extend and make exchange of certain portions of the municipal districts of Ryde and Hunter's Hill."

The motion was agreed to, and the bill was introduced and read the first time.

TEMPORARY SUPPLY BILL.

Mr. M'MILLAN moved,—"That the Temporary Supply Bill be read the third time."

Mr. J. P. ABBOTT said he was absent yesterday when a discussion took place on some remarks made by the hon. member for West Sydney (Mr. Abigail) concerning the destruction of sheep owned by Mr. Markham. The whole of the expense in connection with this matter should have been charged to the Sheep Assessment Act. The destruction took place at a time when there was great excitement and at the request of several deputations representing large pastoral interests in the colony. It was an extreme course to take, but it was felt by the Government that it would be much better to destroy the sheep than to run the risk of having the whole colony infected. In the action for damages brought by Mr. Markham against the Government the Chief Justice went so far as to say that he agreed with the jury. It was no use to take the case to the Privy Council under the circumstances.

Mr. ABIGAIL said he did not reflect in any way on the action taken by the hon. member. As Minister the hon. gentleman could do nothing else but destroy the sheep. What he took exception to was that the Court refused to adjourn the case to allow the present Minister for Lands to give evidence. He had been informed that the amount paid into Court was more than sufficient to cover any damage Mr. Markham had sustained. On that point only had he raised the question. While he was Minister for Mines, and after the first verdict was given, he consulted the Attorney-General, who told him the verdict was a monstrous one, and strongly advised that application be made for a new trial. This was done, and the Full Court refused to grant the application.

The bill was then read the third time, and sent to the Legislative Council with the usual message.

CROWN LANDS BILL.

The House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole for the further consideration of the Crown Lands Bill.

Clause 28. Rent of leases to be subject to reappraisement. Extension of term of leases in the Western division.

Mr. COPELAND said that the proposal involved in the clause was of such importance that, notwithstanding what had been said respecting it, the matter would bear further argument. The Minister proposed to do an injustice to a very large section of the community. He was sure the Land Act never intended to give the Minister power to make a wholesale and sweeping proclamation similar to that made by Mr. Garrett, when Minister. That gentleman, by one proclamation, had done away with the right of the lessees in the Eastern Division to a renewal of their leases. Technically he had power to take away this right. Similarly the Minister had power by proclamation to reserve any lands from sale, and if he adopted a course similar to that adopted by Mr. Garrett in refusing a renewal of leases in this wholesale manner, he might, by one proclamation, reserve the whole of the lands of the colony from sale. The law evidently contemplated that the power of refusing renewals would be exercised only in individual cases. The only corresponding action was that taken by Mr. Farnell in the matter of the lands in the vicinity of Sydney which it was sought to acquire at the upset price at which they were offered and passed in 40 years ago. Technically, it was open to anybody to get possession of these lands at the upset figure. Mr. Farnell, however, finding that persons were endeavouring to take advantage of this technicality, interposed, and strained his authority as Minister so far as to reserve by one proclamation the whole of these lands. His action was taken in the public interest. Mr. Garrett's action, however, was, except technically, quite illegal. The Act said the pastoral lessees should have the right to renewal, but this right the Minister, by a stroke of the pen, took from the lessees in the Eastern division He might just as well have taken it from the other lessees, and had just as much right to do so. The provision—which was a right one in itself, and even a necessary one—had been abused by Mr. Garrett. It was perfectly clear that lessees were to have the right of renewal for five years, save in exceptional instances. This right was only to be disallowed for special reasons. (Hear, hear.) The proposal of the Government really amounted to an attempt to swindle the lessees. ("Hear, hear," "No, no," and "Humbug.") The Act of 1884 held out a bait to lessees to come under its provisions and pay a fair rent, in return for which fixity of tenure was given, with the right to a renewal on the expiration of the lease promised by the Act. The lessees, tempted by these two things, submitted to the yoke, and now it was sought to take away from at least one section of them the extension promised. He trusted that members would not seek to curry favour with the selectors by voting for the clause. He signified his intention of moving, at a later stage of the debate, an amendment to the effect that, "notwithstanding any notification by the Minister, in terms of sub-section 4 of section 78 of the Principal Act, pastoral lessees in the Eastern division shall have a right, at the expiration of their leases, to an extension thereof for a term of five years, and the rent shall be redetermined for such period of extension, provided that where, in the opinion of the local land board, any land by reason of its situation or character may be considered to be required for settlement, the Minister shall have power to to refuse such extension." This would be a fair compromise. But the present proposal really amounted to taking away the land from one grazier to give it to another. It must be self-evident that all agricultural land in the Eastern Division (except that locked up in the reserves) had already passed into private hands. A good deal was still held in the reserves, many of which were either unnecessary or far too large. If the Minister were to throw some of these reserves open to settlement such reserves as the town commons at Cooma, Bombala, &c.—he would provide enough agricultural land for settlement for five years to come. The policy of Mr. Garrett had been to reserve more land than he revoked, and he hoped the present Minister, in the interests of settlement, would adopt a different course. If carried the clause would destroy the Act of 1884, as it referred to lands in the Eastern division. The effect of the proposal would be to resurrect the system in vogue before the Land Act of 1884 was carried, and we should be living again under a regime of land agents. (Hear, hear.) It was contrary to the public interests to have the pastoralists and selectors cutting each other's throat again as they did before the Act of 1884 was passed. One of the chief benefits the country derived under this Act was that the pastoral lessees secured a fixity of tenure, and they could settle down and live in amity and friendship with the selectors who were their neighbours. He hoped the House would see the wisdom of rejecting the clause, and not be blinded with the idea that everything which came from the Government was good. They would be deliberately robbing the public treasury of hundreds of thousands of pounds if they threw open the land when it was not required. It should be their policy to make the land as valuable as possible.

Mr. GARRETT referred to the impolicy of bringing in so comprehensive a bill as this, whereas a bill of one clause to deal with the leases that fall in next year would have been quite sufficient. A reappraisement of the rents at the present time was absolutely necessary, for the public estate had advanced in value, as well as private estates. The law gave the Government the right to reconsider the question of rent at the end of five years, and the right should not be relinquished. The giving up of the right might mean a surrendering of a quarter of a million of money during the next five years, as the object of the amendment was to deprive the Crown of the power to increase rents. [Mr. COPELAND: No.] The time must come when what had been known as squatting leases in the Eastern division must cease for ever, and when all Crown lands in the division, unless otherwise reserved for public purposes, must be thrown open for settlement in the most free manner possible. If the amendment were adopted those lands would be locked up, and a clog would be placed on the progress of the division. He was strongly in favour of the clause remaining as it was. Indeed, they should restore the Act of 1861 in the Eastern division, and to move in the direction suggested would be acting against the best interests of the people in the division. His complaint against the Government was that they had exceeded their promises in the bill before the House. They merely promised to bring in an Amending Bill, dealing with the 52nd clause, and the manner in which the rent should be dealt with at the end of the first five years. The bill should have gone no further, and if his voice could stop it it should go no further, as he maintained they had no right to reopen the whole question of land legislation. In the whole discussion that had taken place there was one feature and desire uppermost, which was, by a side issue, to benefit the Crown lessees. Mr. Copeland had said that the clause he proposed to amend would swindle the lessees. Such was a scandalous and false charge. He would advise the Government to withdraw the bill altogether, and allow the present law to take its course, so that the people of the country might obtain justice; because, as a matter of fact, the lessees in the Eastern division had already received notice that their leases would not be renewed. The settlement of the land question ought to be brought about on a permanent basis, and they should make a firm stand against the various interests which were brought to bear upon the matter. The best guide which they could have was the wish of the people: but instead of being actuated by a desire for the people's interests, members were simply advocating class interests. He felt that when he had been in office he had not done full justice to the people of the country, because he had not raised the rents half enough. He would oppose the alteration of this clause by every means in his power. There was not 5 per cent. of the reserves which they had now which could be thrown open for conditional purchase without injuring the public interests. With regard to the leases in the Eastern division, although a notification had been given that these leases would not be renewed, anyone of these notices could be cancelled by a simple proclamation, so that it was not absolutely necessary that all the leases should terminate simply because the notice of termination of the lease had been given. He had obtained the opinion of the late Attorney-General on this point before issuing the notice, and had been informed that the notices could be recalled at any time. The reason for the long notice of two years was that it gave the Minister time to reconsider the question, and to decide what should be done in each individual case. He had always acted in the true interests of the people of the country, and not in those of any particular class, and hence the reason why so many of his actions were criticised now by those representing particular classes.

Mr. J. P. ABBOTT said that he was tired of reiterating old charges against previous Administrations, and he trusted that the matter would now be permanently allowed to drop. He considered that the notice with regard to the termination of the leases in the Eastern Division should not have been given wholesale, because there were many runs where no settlement had as yet taken place, and which it was unlikely would be settled for some time yet. If the whole of the Eastern Division were put under occupation licence, squatters would fight selectors for the land as in the days before the passing of the Act of 1884. The pastoralists would fight selectors by means of 40-acre selections, with 1240-acre leases. There had never been a clause more favourable to dummyism than clause 25 of the bill. He could hardly understand the Minister's statement that only a comparatively small amount of land was available for settlement in the Eastern Division. The Public Works Committee, of which he was a member, had that day been shown that 470,000 acres of good land were locked up in reserves in the Clarence and Richmond district. Could not this land be thrown open to settlement? The Minister had said that not 5 per cent. of these reserves could be thrown open. He (Mr. Abbott) said, on the contrary, that from 50 to 70 per cent. of the reserves in the district, he had mentioned, could well be dispensed with. How many people would not that find land for? Returns showed that in the Clarence and Richmond district population was increasing at the rate of 11¼ per cent. as against a rate of 4 per cent. for the whole colony. Nature evidently intended that part of the colony for small settlers. He could understand a proposal to withdraw the leases in that district. But why was the House asked to throw open all lands in the Eastern Division? The result would be similar to what occurred in the country prior to 1884. The land would either not be taken up by selectors at all, or it would pass through their hands to those of the large landholders. He believed that, next to the squatters, the selectors of this country had done the most to bring about the aggregation of large estates, of which they now heard so much. He was not prepared to vote in favour of the withdrawal of the land in the Eastern Division from the present lessees, on the chance of its being taken up by someone else. During the past 28 years only 16,000,000 of acres in all had been alienated by conditional purchase. Why, then, should the 11,000,000 acres in the Eastern Division be all thrown open at once? If the land were wanted for legitimate settlement, by all means it should be thrown open. But, as the case stood, the only result would be a renewal of the old struggles between lessee and selector. If the proposal were carried so much the better for the lawyers, and so much the worse for the country.

Mr. REID said that Mr. Garrett's contention that, in refusing renewals to lessees in the Eastern Division, he had only allowed the law to take its course, was an incorrect one. The law provided that the pastoral lessees should, in the ordinary course, have the right of extension; and Mr. Garrett's action was really an interference with the law, under cover of the exercise of a Ministerial discretion. (Hear, hear.) The last thing ever contemplated by the framers of the Act was the issue of this wholesale notification. The policy of allowing the Minister a discretionary power to withdraw land from lease was a wise one, but that power was meant to be exercised wisely, gradually, and carefully, and in the light of circumstances. But, by one stroke of Mr. Garrett's pen, the whole of the Eastern Division was thrown open in this reckless way—and Mr. Garrett regarded this as an act of statesmanship, and came before the House with a declaration that he wished all the public lands could be sold. He (Mr. Reid) would also be willing that these lands should be sold, provided people, when they took "the eyes of the country," would take the rest of the country also. He hoped that if they were to throw open these lands for settlement, it would be upon some system; not in any haphazard way. As the proposal stood they were really telling the clever men of the country to come and take up the land for themselves, and that then the public would be happy. But then, the public would be "done." There had certainly been an improvement of late years. The provision that survey should precede selection in special areas was a distinct advance. Some land in the Eastern Division would certainly be required for settlement before long; but he thought Mr. Copeland's proposal would meet the case. The proposal to extend the currency of the leases in the Eastern Division, it was true, had been defeated. But he was of opinion that the proposal which it was understood Mr. Copeland would move would answer the purpose. The bill proposed that the lessees in the Eastern Division should be turned adrift—with their 30,000,000 of sheep and 1,300,000 head of cattle. He was quite of the opinion that these lands should be taken when required for settlement, but till they were required they should be left in the hands of the pastoral lessees. He hoped the Minister would accept Mr. Copeland's proposal. They could not disallow the extension of these leases without paralysing the efforts of the holders, and they could not paralyse one great industry without injuring the country. The whole of the leasehold area should not be thrown open to indiscriminate selection—that is to say, to the land-sharks.

Mr. WALL said he had not regarded, and did not regard it as desirable that the whole of the Eastern Division should be thrown open. Numbers of the properties could not be profitably occupied unless security of tenure were granted. Not one-tenth of the pastoral properties in the Eastern Division were held under pastoral lease. Nearly all were under annual lease and occupation license, and were now open to selection from day to day.

Mr. LEE said he hoped the bill would not be withdrawn if the proposed amendment of Mr. Copeland were carried. The bill contained many good amendments of the Act of 1884.

Mr. O'SULLIVAN said he was in favour of the clause as it stood. The leasehold areas represented the best part of the country, and these were the lands that should be thrown open. They required a change in the way of all lands fit for settlement and agriculture being thrown open, so that people desiring homes might obtain them by bona-fide settlement. Either take the clause as it stood or let them reject it and throw out the bill.

Mr. BRUNKER said he hoped that so long as he had the honour of holding the position he did and the position of a representative of the people, he would treat his duties from a far higher standard than legislating for any particular section of the community. (Hear, hear.) His actions would be guided by the desire to do the best for the great masses of the people. (Hear, hear.) He maintained that the pastoral lessees in the Eastern division had not been unjustly treated. It would be found that the pastoral lessees would protect themselves by taking advantage of the 35th clause of the Act, which provided for the taking up of land in the interior to meet such specific cases. Then the leasehold areas which were of exceptional quality, could be made available for the masses of the people in this and other countries desirous of settling here. If the clause were passed in a correct form, it would be one which would ultimately be acceptable to the colony generally. During the past 12 months he had received numerous inquiries from South Australia and Victoria for land in New South Wales for settlement, and he regretted to say that, notwithstanding his knowledge of the country, he could give no information as to where they could settle. (Hear, hear.) It was their duty to remove all such obstructions. The rents received from pastoral lessees in the Eastern division compared with the area were merely nominal. The rents were:—For pastoral leases, £50,000; for occupation licenses, £21,500; a total of £71,500, and out of that amount £25,951 remained unpaid. It would be seen that the pastoral lessees in the Central division contributed £45,530 out of the £584,000 received from the pastoral lessees of the whole colony. In all there were 6,972,541 acres under pastoral lease and 4,474,309 under occupation license. The reserves available in the Grafton district of the Eastern division—areas not required—which would be suitable for agricultural purposes were 15,000 acres; for new settlement for pastoral purposes, 39,000 acres; for grazing lands in addition to the present buildings, 6000 acres, making a total of 60,000 acres instead of 400,000 acres, as stated by one hon. member. He would guarantee if those 60,000 acres were thrown open they would be taken up in six months. As a matter of fact, the principle of the clause was adopted by a large majority last week, and he hoped it would be agreed to that evening. He moved as an amendment to line 28, that if no application be made the lease shall continue to be dealt with as regards the rent thereof, "and the term thereof shall, except in the case of conditional leases, remain," as if this Act had not been passed.

Mr. JAMES INGLIS believed the amendment, as proposed by his colleague, would meet many of the fatal objections in the clause. Half the pastoral lessees in the Eastern division were really the class of men they wished to see on the soil, small settlers, and if they were turned out, their place would only be taken by others of the same class. There were many parts of the Eastern division where small settlement was really impossible, and if the amendment proposed by Mr. Copeland were passed, it would meet many of the objections raised to the clause. He had a desire to give the Minister every assistance in passing this measure, which he considered to be a very deserving one, but at the same time he considered that the Minister should refrain from doing what he believed would be a very grave injury to a deserving class.

Mr. BRUNKER proposed as an amendment in line 30, after the word thereto, the addition of the words "pastoral or homestead."

Mr. LEVIEN said that he believed public opinion was entirely in favour of this clause as it stood, and against the renewal of the pastoral leases in the Eastern division.

The amendment was agreed to, and the clause was further amended by the excision of the words "pastoral or homestead" in the next line.

Mr. HASSALL moved as an amendment the addition of the words in line 39, which would have the effect of making the terms of leases in the Central division 15 years, the term to be computed from the commencement of the present lease. He thought that this amendment would have the effect of accurately defining the position of the lessees in the Central division, and would secure them from being turned out at the end of their 10 years' tenure, at the will of an irresponsible Minister.

Mr. CRICK said that he did not consider that the lessees in the Central division should be placed in a better position than those in the Eastern division. If this amendment were carried, he would oppose the bill by every means in his power.

Mr. GORMLY said that if this amendment were carried, the only course open to the Minister would be to throw it aside, for the character of the bill would be completely changed, and members would oppose it in its future stages to such an extent that it would never become law.

Mr. HASSALL said the intention he had in view in moving his amendment was to give the lessees a 15 years' tenure, not from the present date, but from the commencement of the lease under the Act of 1884. The House had decided to grant conditional leaseholders a 15 years' tenure, and surely it would consent to place the squatters in a corresponding position, and give fair play to both classes. The pastoral lessees had surely done something for the colony in the past. They were the original pioneers of the country. Rather than see an injustice committed to the squatters he would be willing that the House should take back the privilege it had granted to the selectors at his instance a few evenings before.

Mr. KIDD urged that the committee should adopt the amendment.

Mr. HUTCHISON (Glen Innes) said they had just heard that New South Wales would not have been what it was but for the squatters. In his opinion the squatters would not have been what they were but for New South Wales. (Loud laughter.) He should oppose the amendment.

Mr. COPELAND intended to support the amendment. It was better in any case to have a fixed and definite tenure, rather than a second edition of what they had experienced at the hands of Mr. Garrett. The lessees had now leases for 10 years certain, with the option of renewal. If it were wise to give conditional leaseholders a 15 years tenure, especially in the Eastern Division, the House should deal equally with the Crown lessees in the Central Division. As the case stood, a family of four could take up 10,000 acres for 15 years under conditional lease. The House would neither stultify itself nor deal over liberally if it conceded to pastoral tenants what was now asked for. It would be better for the banks, the lessees, and the Government to know definitely the term over which the tenure was to extend.

Mr. HAYES said he thought there was no need to deal with the question at that time. The leases would not expire till six years hence; and before it became imperative to deal with the matter another Parliament would have to be elected. That Parliament would be in a better position than the present to judge how far the land under lease would be required for settlement. The country could not afford to have its lands locked up for another five years in addition to the time already allowed. There were a number of unnecessary reserves in the Central Division which should be thrown open for settlement. The great trouble was that it was next to impossible to get the Department to throw open any of them. He hoped the Minister would remain firm in his opposition to the amendment.

Mr. J. P. ABBOTT also suggested that matters should be left as they were as regarded the leases in question. (Hear, hear.) These leases had yet six years to run. The next Parliament would be in a better position than the present to know the extent to which this land would be required for settlement. The pastoral lessees in the Central Division were not in the same position as leaseholders in the Eastern Division. He thought that Mr. Garrett did an unwise thing in terminating the leases of the whole of the runs in that division. He should have selected those which would probably be required for settlement, and have allowed the leases of the others to continue. He was strongly of opinion that the country should not tie its hands as suggested by the amendment, and that the consideration of the clause should be postponed till the question of compensation for improvements could be considered.

The amendment was then put, and negatived by 60 votes to 16.

Mr. A'BECKETT said he had an amendment to propose with reference to the leases in the Central Division. He thought lessees should have an extension subject to the right of the Government to resume, and if this extension could not be granted for the whole of the holdings, it should be granted for one-half. The amendment he wished to propose was to the effect that the pastoral lessees in the Central Division should have an extension of their leases over the whole of their pastoral holdings for 10 years beyond their present lease, but on the terms that the Government should have the power to resume one-half of these leaseholds as required during that extension.

Mr. BRUNKER said he did not think it necessary to debate the question raised by the amendment, as the House had already decided it. So far as the principle embodied in the amendment went, it was more adverse to settlement than the previous one. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. LYNE considered the amendment not so good as the one which the House had just negatived. But he thought it an injustice to the lessees of the Central Division, after the vote given on a previous evening, in creasing the terms of conditional lessees, not to increase their terms and place them in a like position. It was an act of unfairness on the part of the House not to concede this. If an amendment was introduced similar to that proposed by Mr. Copeland a great difficulty would be overcome, and a great injustice likely to arise would be obviated. (Hear, hear.) There was a great portion of the country in which the land was required for settlement, and it should be thrown open in the Central division; but there was a great portion also of worse land, with a worse rainfall, and with a worse carrying capacity, which should never have been in the Eastern division, and it would be doing an injustice if they did not allow the lessees an extension of time considerably beyond the time mentioned.

Mr. O'SULLIVAN suggested that the clause should be withdrawn until the question of compensation was settled.

Mr. COPELAND said he considered it desirable to postpone the clause. He hoped also that the amendment would be withdrawn.

Mr. GORMLY contended that no extension of lease should be given, and that when the present leases expired the land should be thrown open for settlement. There was no large quantity of land available for settlement at present in the Central division. The amendment should be rejected.

Mr. CHANTER considered that it would be wise to withdraw the amendment.

Mr. BRUNKER pointed out that in 1887 the area of land alienated was 2,268,340 acres—alienated by auction, by conditional lease, and by conditional purchase.

Mr. DOWEL said he knew that a great demand existed for the land under leasehold in the Eastern division.

Mr. ALISON urged the claims of the Central district at considerable length, maintaining that its pastoral lessees were being unfairly treated.

Mr. J. P. ABBOTT replied, saying that he saw no necessity of discussing the question of whether the leases should be extended or not. He was as anxious to do justice to the pastoral tenants as any man in the House, but they must bear in mind that the country was never intended for the pastoral tenants when other persons could take their place. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. A'BECKETT said he would withdraw his amendment, but he trusted the Minister would afford an opportunity of recommitting the clause.

The amendment was then withdrawn.

Mr. R. B. WILKINSON contended that there was a necessity to settle without delay the question of the extension of the pastoral leases. It was not the case that the leaseholders knew their position when they came under the Act. The action of Mr. Garrett in proclaiming that no extension would be granted in the Eastern division had made the position of leaseholders in other divisions uncertain and precarious. He hoped that the Minister would recommit the clause after the question of compensation for improvements had been dealt with. He asked the Minister to give a pledge to that effect.

Mr. ABBOTT proposed that before the words "in the case of," in sub-section A, in clause 28, the following words be inserted:—"That, subject to the provisions in section 81 of the principal Act, the Minister, upon application by the licensee within three months after the passing of the Act, shall direct that a reappraisement of any resumed area shall be made, and."

Mr. GARRETT urged that the committee should not enter upon the consideration of a material amendment in the clause at that late hour, and without notice of the amendment. He suggested that the Chairman should leave the chair. He objected to the amendment, on the ground that it gave the tenant a right which the owner (the Crown) did not possess.

Mr. J. P. ABBOTT quoted from the Act of 1884 to show that the Crown already possessed the right to demand a re-appraisement.

Mr. CRICK opposed the suggestion to adjourn.

Mr. LYNE suggested that the clause should be allowed to pass on the understanding that it would be reconsidered after the question of compensation for improvements had been dealt with.

Mr. GARRETT also urged that the clause should be reconsidered after the question of compensation for improvements had been considered. On that understanding the proposed amendments might be accepted pro forma.

Mr. BRUNKER said that if the words "in the prescribed manner" were inserted after the word "application" in Mr. Abbott's amendment, he would accept it. [Mr. J. P. ABBOTT: I will agree to that.] He didn't think he would be justified in positively promising that the clause would be reconsidered, but if it were found essential, after the consideration of the 43rd clause, that the clause should be reconsidered, he would do his best to act fairly towards the House.

Messrs. GARRETT and J. P. ABBOTT urged the Minister to give a definite promise.

Mr. GORMLY hoped the Minister would not pledge himself. To do so would mean to open the door to almost interminable discussion.

Mr. PLUMB urged that the Minister would give the promise asked for.

Mr. ALLISON moved an amendment to include the Central Division in the terms of the amendment.

Mr. CHANTER said he would oppose the amendment.

Mr. W. E. ABBOTT thought it would be a good thing to include the Central Division.

Mr. A'BECKETT considered it was reasonable that the reappraisement should extend to the Central Division.

Mr. J. P. ABBOTT said he had no objection to the inclusion of the Central Division.

Mr. BRUNKER said he would accept the amendment, but not the further amendment.

Mr. CRICK contended that the amendment as proposed to be amended should be adopted.

Mr. FITZGERALD considered it absurd to ask that the land in the Central Division should be reappraised.

Mr. J. P. ABBOT pointed out that the position of the runs in the Central division was not the same as in the Western country.

Mr. SLATTERY concluded that the arguments of Mr. Alison were unanswerable, and that the Central division was being treated unjustly.

Mr. LAKEMAN supported the previous speaker, and said he would vote for the further amendment.

Mr. DICKENS also supported the further amendment, which he considered was only a just and fair proposal.

Mr. TRAILL was of opinion that the balance of testimony was distinctly against any re-appraisement at all.

Mr. CRICK thought an act of injustice would be inflicted on the Central division if the amendment were not carried.

Mr. CHANTER twitted Mr. Crick with having gone over from the position of a bitter opponent to the pastoral lessees in the Central Division to that of their champion. He opposed the amendment, asserting that the Central pastoralists had no just cause of complaint.

On division Mr. Allison's amendment on an amendment was negatived by 28 to 25 votes.

The question, "That the words proposed to be inserted be inserted," was carried on the voices.

Mr. COPELAND moved that in line 52 the amendment referred to by him earlier in the evening be inserted.

Mr. LEVIEN opposed the amendment, and suggested the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. CHANTER contended that on a point of order the amendment was irregular. The matter had practically been settled by a division arrived at several days ago.

After discussion, the CHAIRMAN declined to rule the amendment out of order, though he stated it trenched to some extent on a question already dealt with.

Mr. LEVIEN again urged the adjournment.

Mr. BRUNKER declined to accept the amendment. ("Divide.")

Mr. Copeland's amendment was negatived by 30 to 16.

The clause as amended was agreed to. The House resumed, progress was reported, leave was given to sit again, and the House adjourned at 2.25 a.m.

The LYNCH GIRLS and THE QUEENSLAND IMMIGRATION ACT.

The following is the explanation given by the magistrate for the decision he arrived at in the case of the Lynch girls, who offended against the Queensland Immigration Act:—

"Water Police Office,
"Sydney, 20th June, 1889.

"Sir,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of 20th instant, submitted from the Colonial Secretary, for consideration, with minute thereon of the Minister of Justice of the same date, requesting me to report thereon. Re decision given by me at the Water Police Court, re Lynch girls: Under the Queensland Immigration Act and Fugitive Offenders' Act, I beg to state that these were the only Acts before me in the matter. The 17th section of the former makes £10 as the maximum to be paid by the immigrant under the section. The 21st section makes the offence a misdemeanour. The 22nd section allows them to leave on payment of the amount of passage, but it is ambiguous, in relation to the two former sections. Under the 19th section of the Fugitive Offenders Act ample powers of discretion are given to magistrates in all cases coming under its provisions, which this case did. And having in view all the circumstances of this case I exercised—and I am confirmed in the justice of the course pursued by me by the opinions expressed in the Legislative Council by Sir William Manning and Mr. Salomons. Herewith is attached copy of the depositions taken, from which it appears quite clear that not one word was ever said by the Queensland authorities, when refusing the tender of £20, of any other amount being required by them. And in no way whatever was I aware—as Mr. Roberts, solicitor, acting in the case for the Queensland Government, never alluded to any other amount being due as passage money—in fact, appeared to assume that this was the amount to be paid. Mr. Roberts certainly asked for £21 as his costs, which I did not allow. Mr. Roberts's contention was that I ought not to exercise the discretion given to me by the 19th section of the Fugitive Offenders' Act, but send them on. This I declined to do. There was a case quoted by Mr. Slattery of Counsels under same Act, N. S. W., L. 12, in which the presiding magistrate had refused to exercise this discretion, and in which the Supreme Court had said he ought to have done so. The only remaining point which calls for any further remark from me is the expression of the surprise expressed in the copy of telegram from the Queensland Government that I should have fixed the amount to be paid at £20. I can only say that it would have been surprising if I had fixed on any other sum on the evidence before me. My intention certainly was that they should refund the amount they ought to have paid if leaving the colony before the end of three months.

"I have the honour to be, your obedient servant,
"(Signed) BENJAMIN LEE.

PYRMONT CONGREGATIONAL BAZAAR.

A bazaar in aid of the funds of the Pyrmont Congregational Church was opened in the school-hall yesterday afternoon, by Alderman Martin, M.L.A., in the presence of a good gathering. The stalls, which are six in number, are arranged down each side of the hall, the flowers and refreshments being displayed at each end. A large quantity of useful and fancy articles were artistically arranged, and the walls and ceilings were decorated with flags, while rows of many-coloured fairy lamps strung from side to side had a very pretty effect. The Rev. James Buchan, M.A., in opening the proceedings, referred to the generosity of the ladies who had spontaneously undertaken the work of getting up a bazaar, and congratulated them upon the success which had so far attended their efforts. Their thanks were also due to the friends outside the church who had rendered assistance. Alderman Martin, M.L.A., in a few appropriate remarks, declared the sale open, for which he was accorded a vote of thanks. Business was commenced, and during the afternoon and evening music was contributed by the members and friends of the church. The following ladies are in charge of the stalls:—Mesdames Buchan and Sullivan, Mesdames M'Clukan and Henson, Mesdames Pain and Walker, Mesdames Campbell and Rimes, Mesdames Fraser and Williams and Mrs. Webster. Mrs. Powell presided over the refreshment stall, and Misses Wall and Sonne were in charge of the flowers. The young ladies assisting were Misses Rutherford, Henson, Isabella Parsons, Lewis, Maidment, Walker, Scott, Parsons, Baird, and Neaves. The bazaar will be continued to-day and Friday.

THE PRESBYTERY OF WAGGA WAGGA.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

CULCAIRN, WEDNESDAY.

The Presbytery of Wagga Wagga met at Culcairn to-day, when members were present from Corowa, Albury, Wagga Wagga, Germanton, Tumberumba, Culcairn, and Junee. The Rev. James Henry, Moderator, presided. The Rev. Thomas Fraser Fullerton tabled his resignation of the Junee charge, which was accepted, and the usual certificate was given him. The Rev. John M'Intyre was appointed Presbytery representative on the standing committee in the room of Mr. Fullerton, resigned. A permit from the General Assembly of the proposed Church Property Amendment Act was considered, and approved. The report of the committee on Presbyterial visitation was read by the Rev. William Scott Whittier, and the whole subject was considered in committee and adjourned for the next meeting, to be held in Wagga. During the afternoon Principal Rainiy arrived by mail train at Culcairn, accompanied by the Hon. James Balfour, on a visit to his Round Hill Station, and was met by the Presbytery and welcomed to New South Wales. He afterwards was presented with an address by the Moderator, and made a suitable reply expressive of his favourable impression of the colonies, and his regret that he could not visit the more inland towns. On the resumption of the Presbytery the Rev. William Scott Whittier announced that arrangements had been completed by which the individual expenses to the late General Assembly were paid off by the members of the Presbytery.

FLOODS AND THE RECENT RAIN-STORM.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—You publish to-day a letter from the Government Astronomer, which is apparently intended as a justification of the accuracy of his statements made before the Royal Society, to the effect that he had no hesitation in saying that if on the recent occasion rain equal to that which fell about Sydney had fallen generally over the catchments of the Hawkesbury and Hunter, most, if not all, the towns on their banks would have been entirely swept away. Although on such a meteorological speciality as this, concerning which Mr. Russell is doubtless better informed than myself, I cannot positively deny the accuracy of his statements, yet, as a student of science for the past 35 years, and not a professional man in the ordinary acceptation of the term, I availed myself of the opportunity to express my doubts as to the correctness of the conclusions arrived at for the important towns lying along the Hawkesbury. So far as low-lying West Maitland is concerned Mr. Russell's statement may be correct enough, but are the important towns of Windsor and Richmond to be placed in the same category? A survey of the Hawkesbury was made in 1869 to discover some means of mitigating the effects of its floods. That survey was made by professional men, and it doubtless cost the country a considerable expenditure of money. Can Mr. Russell or the gentleman who conducted the survey inform us if any report of the results has been published? As one who contributed no small amount of information to the Harbour and Rivers Department respecting the local floods, and also as one whose interests are intimately bound up with the welfare of the district, I am surely not seeking too much when I ask for this information.

I am, &c. JOHN TEBBUTT.

LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.—Wednesday, June 26.

No. 1 Jury Court.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice Foster.)

WANT V. MOSS AND WIFE (PART HEARD.)

Mr. Pilcher, Q.C., and Mr. O'Connor, instructed by Mr. J. M'Laughlin, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Field, instructed by Messrs. Sly and Hamilton, for the defendants. This was an action brought by John Henry Want against S. A. Moss and Victoria Moss, his wife, to recover compensation for obstruction by the female defendant to plaintiff's use of the Theatre Royal "O. P. Box," which plaintiff had secured under lease from the late Samuel Lazar.

The plaintiff's case closed yesterday, and Mr. Field now formally moved for a non-suit, on the ground that there was no evidence in the plaintiff's case of the lease under which he claimed. Another ground, which would depend upon his Honor's ruling as to his application to be allowed to plead the statute of frauds, was that there was no evidence to satisfy the statute of frauds. Another ground that he submitted was one which was now pending before the Privy Council on appeal, namely, that being a lease for over 3 years it ought to have been by deed, and that the evidence given in plaintiff's case showed that the document under which he claimed, if anything at all, was not a lease but an assignment of a reversion, and that the assignment of a reversion must be by deed.

His Honor declined to nonsuit, and evidence was then called on behalf of the defendant.

Victoria Moss, wife of the male plaintiff, stated that early in 1881 she was living with her brother, the late Samuel Lazar, and knew a great deal about his business; her brother held the lease of the Theatre Royal for a period of 21 years; between March and June, 1882, she went to the Theatre Royal, and always occupied the O.P. box with her friends, and so far as the knew there was no objection by Mr. Want to her use of the box; she was never asked whether she had plaintiff's permission, and she never heard his name mentioned in connection with the matter; in June, 1882, her brother became very ill, and during his illness, and for a long time subsequent to his death, she did not visit the Theatre, but plaintiff's claim to the box had nothing whatever to do with her absence from the theatre; in 1885 she resumed her visits to the theatre with her friends, and she used the O.P. box. Before that, however, it had been agreed between her and plaintiff that she was to have the use of the box on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, and that the plaintiff was to have the box on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays; she selected the days without reference to Mr. Want. In cross-examination, the witness stated that on the termination of the three nights a week agreement she wrote to Williamson, Garner, and Musgrove stating that Mr. Want's right to the box necessarily ceased, and requested them to discontinue to allow him to use the box, unless with her written authority.

William Neild, manager of the City Bank, stated that after June, 1882, he had been in the habit of using the Theatre Royal O.P. box by permission of Mrs. Moss, and he was never asked to show any authority from plaintiff for doing so. In the beginning of 1884 as disputes had arisen between plaintiff and Mrs. Moss as to the right to use the box, he on behalf of Mrs. Moss conducted the negotiations between them, and upon his recommendation she acceded to a proposition that each should use the box three nights in the week; he never understood that plaintiff claimed the exclusive right to the use of the box during the balance of the late Mr. Lazar's lease of the theatre.

At this stage the case was further adjourned until the following day.

No. 2 Jury Court.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice Stephen and a jury of four.)

GEDDES V. LAW AND ANOTHER.

Mr. Bateman, instructed by Mr. H. S. Harden, appeared for the plaintiff, and Dr. Coghlan, instructed by Mr. G. F. Burcher, for the defendant, John Law. The other defendant, Alfred J. Law, was unrepresented. The case for the plaintiff was that the defendants were partners carrying on a business at Glebe, in which they dealt in hides. The plaintiff, who is a wool and hide merchant sold to Alfred J. Law, in January and February last, hides to the extent of £252 3s. 4d., and it was contended that the purchases then made were for the purposes of the partnership. This, however, was denied on behalf of the defendants, who called evidence to show that there was no partnership existing between them, and that the debt in question was incurred by Alfred J. Law solely, who had since become a bankrupt. The jury found that there was no partnership between the defendants, and, therefore, gave a verdict for them.

MARSHALL AND ANOTHER V. DUCHATEL.

Mr. Pilcher, Q.C., and Mr. Cohen, instructed by Messrs. Stephen, Jaques, and Stephen, appeared for the plaintiffs; and Mr. Barton, Q.C., and Dr. Sly, instructed by Mr. W. T. A. Shorter, for the defendant. This was an action brought by William Charles Marshall and Dexter Brigham against Charles Francois Duchatel to recover the sum of £1275, being the amount of rent alleged to be due by defendant for an hotel at Silverton, which he had leased from plaintiffs in 1885, at a rental of £416 per year. The case was originally before the Court on Friday last, when his Honor adjourned it till Wednesday, in order to allow the defendant to move, before a Judge in Chambers, for leave to add another plea, and this application having been made and refused, the case was now proceeded with. Plaintiffs claimed that under an agreement dated the 9th January, 1885, defendant leased the hotel in question from them, at £8 per week, payable monthly for a period of five years, and at the time the writ was issued he was in arrears to the amount which plaintiffs now sought to recover. Defendant pleaded that the plaintiffs did not let the hotel on the terms stated, and that if such a lease existed it was for a term exceeding three years, namely, five years, and should therefore have been in writing and signed by the defendant or some legally appointed agent.

At the close of the plaintiffs' case, Mr. Barton moved for a nonsuit, on the ground that there was no evidence of any lease; that the agreement put in did not appear to be identified at all, and that there was no evidence of tenancy.

Mr. Cohen submitted that there was clear evidence of tenancy under the agreement and that they were not required to prove the payment of rent. Under the agreement of June, 1874, there was an arrangement by which defendant became the manager of the hotel. That agreement was terminated in January, 1885, after which time defendant occupied the premises and agreed to pay rent.

His Honor reserved his decision.

In Chambers.—(Before Mr. Justice Foster.)

MONT DE PIETE DEPOSIT AND INVESTMENT COMPANY V. CLARE.

Mr. Gordon appeared on behalf of the plaintiffs, and moved for a rule nisi to enter the verdict in the above case for the plaintiffs. The action, which was tried before Mr. District Court Judge Wilkinson last week, was brought by the Mont de Piété Company against Clare for conversion and detinue of certain furniture. At the close of the plaintiffs' case defendant's counsel moved for a nonsuit on several grounds, but his Honor refused to nonsuit, and after going into evidence he found a verdict for the defendant, but reserved leave to the plaintiffs to move the Full Court to have the verdict entered for him in the sum of £50. It appeared that one Chudleigh in January, 1881, had given a bill of sale to the plaintiff company, and in January of the following year he became insolvent. At the time he sequestrated his estate the furniture included in the bill of sale had not been seized by the plaintiff company, but was in possession of Clare, who was Chudleigh's tenant, and had leased the furniture from him. Afterwards there was a meeting of creditors, who agreed to allow Chudleigh his household furniture under a resolution which they had power to come to under the Bankruptcy Act. The manager of the plaintiff company then went to Clare, and demanded possession of the furniture by virtue of their bill of sale; but Clare refused to give it up or recognise the company in any way. It was also proved that the manager of the company saw Mr. Morris, the official assignee in Chudleigh's estate, who told him that he made no claim of any kind to the furniture, and would so inform Clare in writing. The company thereupon sued Clare to recover possession of the furniture, with the result above stated. The plaintiff company did not in any way prove in the insolvency of Chudleigh, as they did not recognise him as being indebted to them, and they stood upon their rights under the bill of sale, and did not concur in the resolution arrived at by the creditors of Chudleigh. The question was whether a bill of sale was absolutely put an end to by insolvency, or whether the rights of the grantee of the bill of sale were merely subordinate to the rights of the plaintiffs. The rule was moved for mainly on the ground that there was no evidence to show that the plaintiffs' rights under the bill of sale had in any way ceased.

The rule was granted, returnable on the first day of next term, subject to the usual security.

POTTER V. BOWLING.

This was a special case stated for the decision of the Court. It appeared that one Bowling applied to the Metropolitan Licensing Magistrates for a renewal of the license of his hotel, known as the Salutation Hotel, Botany-road, Alexandria. Sub-inspector Potter put in an objection in the following terms:—"I respectfully beg to object to the renewal of the license held by Bowling for the Salutation Hotel, on the ground that he is a person of bad repute. In March last Bowling applied for the above house, and on inquiry being made at North Shore, his late residence, he received excellent references, and on the 26th of that month the license was transferred to him. A few days after a man named J. Lowe reported to me that his wife had clandestinely left her husband about the 26th of March, and from something he had been told he went to Bowling's hotel, and found the wife there; they were evidently cohabiting together, and he discovered that immoral relations had existed between them while at North Shore. The persons referred to have been under the observation of the police from that time until the present, and there can be no doubt but that they are living together as man and wife." No depositions were taken, but Sub-inspector Potter was sworn, and he stated that the objection was correct, whereupon the attorney for Bowling interposed, and asked Potter if there was any other objection, and he answered "No." The attorney then said that Bowling did not admit that such objection was correct, but without calling any evidence he submitted to the magistrates as a matter of law, on the authority of Reg. v. Leader, 16 C. B. N. S., 584, that even if immorality, such as was complained of, had been affirmatively proved, such proof would not in itself show that Bowling was a person of "bad repute." The magistrates determined that the matter stated afforded no ground of answer or defence to the complaint, and they refused to renew the license. Bowling being aggrieved by this decision appealed, and a case under the Justices' Appeal Act, containing the above facts, was stated by the magistrates for the opinion of the Court as to whether their determination was erroneous in point of law. On Monday last the case came on in Chambers, when Mr. Healy, instructed by the Crown Solicitor, appeared for Sub-inspector Potter in support of the magistrates' decision, and took the preliminary objection that under the first section of the Justices' Appeal Act, 45 Vic., No. 4, a case might be stated by justices after the hearing and determination of "any information or complaint." This matter was neither an information nor a complaint, and therefore there was no power to state a case. This exact point had never been taken before, either here or in England. The words "information and complaint" had, both of them, definite and well-known legal meanings attached to them, and it could not be contended that an application for renewal of a license, even if an objection was taken to such renewal, was within the meaning ordinarily attached to either word. The case was then adjourned until to-day, when Mr. Salomons, Q.C., and Mr. Stephen, instructed by Messrs. Slattery and Heydon, appeared for the appellant, and contended that the matter was a complaint within the meaning of the Justices' Appeal Act. Special cases had been stated under the Justices' Appeal Act by way of appeal of appeal from similar proceedings in Eckman v. Mackay, 3 N.S.W. L. R., 358, and ex parte Castles, 3 N.S.W. L. R., 201. The matter was stated on the case itself to be a complaint. He also referred to Steele v. Brannan, L. R. 7 C. P., 261.

His Honor said the matter did not appear to be very clear, but he should overrule the point and continue to hear the case. If it was thought advisable, the question could be taken to the Full Court.

Mr. Salomons then argued that the decision of the magistrates was wrong. The objection taken to the renewal of the license was under the 36th section, sub-section (i), of the Licensing Act, which said that objection might be taken that the applicant was a person of drunken or dissolute habits, or otherwise of bad repute. In this case the applicant was said to be of "bad repute," and the only evidence to support that objection was that he was living with another man's wife. That was not enough to show that a man was of bad repute within the meaning of the Act; there must be something against him which was known to the general public. He cited Wharton's Law Lexicon Tit. as to the legal interpretation of the word "reputation," and Reg. v. Leader, 16 C. B. N. S., 584. Another case exactly in point was in re Poole, 14 Victorian L. R., 519.

Mr. Healy said that by sec. 36 any objection might be taken, not being frivolous or vexatious, which the magistrate considered sufficient. This was in no way a frivolous objection, and the Bench having been satisfied with it his Honor could not overrule their decision.

His Honor reserved his decision until the following morning.

FELL AND OTHERS V. NEW SOUTH WALES SHALE AND OIL COMPANY.

Mr. Stephen stated that leave was given by consent to defendant to plead cross action, plaintiffs to have a certain time to file their replication.

Order accordingly.

MARSHALL AND OTHERS V. DEUCHATELL.

Dr. Sly appeared on behalf of the defendant, and moved for leave to add the following plea in the action, which was in respect of rent claimed by the plaintiffs for the rent of an hotel at Silverton, "that the alleged letting and use and occupation took place after the passing of the Mining Act of 1874, and that at the time of the said alleged letting and use and occupation the lands and messuages were within a goldfield within the meaning of the Act, and were held by the plaintiff William Marshall under and by virtue of a business license then held by him under and by virtue of the provisions of the Act, and not otherwise, which license entitled him to occupy, for the purpose of residence and carrying on his business, certain land, being the land mentioned in plaintiff's declaration, during the continuance of such business license, that is to say, for a period not exceeding 12 months from the date thereof, and neither of the plaintiffs ever resided upon the land, wherefore the defendant says that the said letting and claim for use and occupation were and are in contravention of the said Act, and wholly void in law." Mr. Cohen appeared on behalf of plaintiffs to oppose the motion, and, after hearing argument,

His Honor said he did not think the plea ought to be allowed. He thought it would be demurrable on the ground that it was not a sufficient answer to the action; but, in addition to that, it was too late to set up such a plea. Defendant did not apply previously in Chambers for leave to plead at large, and he was not entitled to obtain that leave now.

In Admiralty.—(Before his Honor Sir F. Darley, Judge Commissary.)

OSBORNE V. A. U. S. N. COMPANY.
A. U. S. N. COMPANY V. OSBORNE.

Mr. Want, Q.C., and Mr. G. R. Campbell, instructed by Messrs. Creagh and Williams, appeared for the plaintiff in the first action and defendant in the second; and Mr. Wise, instructed by Messrs. Sly and Hamilton, appeared for the defendants in the first action and plaintiffs in the second; and it was decided that the finding in the case first named should be accepted as settling the cross action. The owner of the steamship Kurrara sought to recover the sum of £477 9s. 10d. for repairs, demurrage, &c., and the counter claim of the owners of the Eurimbla amounted to £600. The evidence on both sides was concluded, and counsel then addressed his Honor, who reserved his decision.

(Before his Honor Mr. Justice Deffell.)

LION INSURANCE COMPANY V. NEILD.

Mr. Lingen (instructed by Messrs. Norton, Smith, Westgarth, and Co.) appeared for the plaintiffs, the Lion Insurance Co., of New Zealand. The defendant, Mr. J. C. Neild, appeared in person.

The plaintiffs moved for a decree, on further directions, that the defendant forthwith pay into Court to the credit of the cause £809 16s. 1d., found by the Master in Equity to be due to the plaintiffs, less the sum of £26 allowed to the defendant by an order of March 1st following the Master's report, together with interest thereon and upon the sum of £1274 11s. 11d. previously paid into the Court, and that the defendant be ordered to pay costs. The reference to the Master was made under the following decree in Equity, granted in 1885:—"That it be referred to the Master to take an account of all transactions between the plaintiffs and the defendant as the plaintiffs' agent from the first appointment of defendant as such, and to certify the result thereof to this Court." In accordance with the decree the accounts were taken, and the Master reported.

The defendant applied to the court for an extension of time, to enable him to appeal against the master's report.

His Honor dismissed the motion for appeal with costs. He granted an order for the payment into court of the amount found due with interest at 5 per cent., and for the payment of costs of the suit properly incurred by the plaintiffs. His Honor directed the defendant to pay the monies to the plaintiffs within 28 days.

In Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction.—(Before his Honor the Chief Judge in Equity).

In Equity.—(Before his Honor the Chief Judge in Equity.)

AUSTRALIAN TRUST MANAGEMENT, ASSURANCE, AND INVESTMENT COMPANY, LIMITED, V. WORTH AND OTHERS (PART HEARD).

Mr. C. J. Manning, Mr. Lingen, and Mr. Hanbury Davies, instructed by Messrs. Lawrence and M'Lachlan, for the plaintiff company; and Mr. Walker, instructed by Mr. A. Godfrey, for the defendant Charles Stuart Canadell. The remaining defendants, although appearing by Mr. Godfrey, and filing a memo. disputing the plaintiff's claim, had filed no statement of defence, and were not represented at the hearing.

This matter, which was an application by the plaintiffs for an order declaring that a certain meeting of the shareholders of the company had been irregularly convened and improperly conducted, was resumed this morning, and counsel concluded their addresses to his Honor.

His Honor, in delivering judgment, said that the chief point which he had to determine was to decide whether the meeting which was held by some of the shareholders on December 6 was legal or not, and, if so, whether the resolutions carried at it were properly passed. He held that the meeting was not properly convened, because the persons who convened it had no power under the articles of association to do so, except in the case of the default of the directors to comply with the requisition asking them to call a meeting. The directors, he held, had not committed any such default, and therefore the meeting was informal. He held also that the resolutions passed were informal, because in passing them certain books had been used for issuing proxies, and this was irregular. He therefore considered that the plaintiff was entitled to the relief asked, and would grant the application, with costs against all the defendants.

CASSIDY V. OAKES.

Mr. C. J. Manning, instructed by Mr. A. G. Thompson, appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Pilcher and Mr. A. H. Simpson, instructed by Mr. M'Phillamy for the defendant. This was an application made by James Cassidy, of Bathurst, for an order declaring his partnership with the defendant, F. M. Oakes, dissolved. The plaintiff also asked that an account should be taken of the partnership affairs. It appeared from the plaintiff's case that on February 1st, 1889, he went into partnership with Rowland Hassall Oakes and Wm. Hy. Oakes, both now deceased, as auctioneers and commission agents under the style of R. and W. Oakes. The business was carried on until the death of the other two partners, and then the defendant in the present case became a partner. The firm had added to their business that of buying and selling stock, and the plaintiff claimed a share of the profits arising from these transactions. For the defence it was maintained that the plaintiff was only entitled to a partnership share in the auctioneer and commission agent business, and that he had had no interest in the cattle transactions, which were carried on solely by W. H. and R. H. Oakes. The defendant agreed to a dissolution of the partnership, and to accounts being taken, but asked that the representatives of W. H. and R. H. Oakes should be joined as defendants in the case. This was agreed to by the plaintiff, and his Honor consented to the statement of claim being amended. The case was then adjourned.

In Bankruptcy.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice Deffell.)

HEARING OF CREDITORS' PETITIONS.

Frederick James Hamilton v. Frederick Blunt, the younger. An affidavit of probable settlement was filed, and the matter was not proceeded with.

N. S. W. Mont de Piété Deposit and Investment Co., Limited v. Charles S. Lamb. There being no objection, the order for sequestration was made. Mr. Lloyd was appointed official assignee, and the date of the act of bankruptcy settled at May 16.

Charles Augustus Bruxner v. John Henry Munro and James Beith M'Dougall. The petition was dismissed with costs.

PUBLIC EXAMINATIONS.

Re Jesse William White. The bankrupt attended, but he had not filed trading accounts, and the examination was adjourned till July 31st.

Re Harry Renkmore Boulton. The bankrupt attended, and trading accounts not having been filed the examination was adjourned till July 31st.

Re James Ambrose Shinnick. The bankrupt attended and desired to amend his statement. Examined by Mr. Morris, official assignee, the bankrupt said that he was a grazier, and dealt largely in store stock; early in the year he travelled into Victoria with 13,000 sheep, but he failed to sell them; he brought the sheep back again as far as Wagga, but there was no grass, and he could not proceed further; he sold some of the sheep at Wagga, and the remainder at Albury, and realised upon them about £2000; the bulk of the money was received in notes, and he travelled about the colony carrying them on his person; when he arrived in Sydney the notes were cashed into gold; he put the gold in two canvas bags, and placed them in a chest of drawers; and on the 25th April, during his absence from home, a greater portion of the money was stolen; he called a meeting of his creditors, and offered them 10s. in the £; they refused that sum, and asked for 12s. 6d. The bankrupt was declared to have passed his public examination, subject to any other examination which might be required, and he was ordered to comply with Rule 138 before the 9th July.

William Starke Galbraith. In the absence of the bankrupt, the examination was adjourned sine die. At a later stage the bankrupt attended, and, in answer to his Honor, said he was 24 years of age, and he commenced business in the wine and spirit trade as a minor; he desired to amend his statement by adding one creditor. The bankrupt was examined by Mr. Alfred De Lissa, on behalf of Messrs. James Hennessy and Co. He stated that a decree was made in equity against him for selling bottles of brandy bearing forged labels, corks, and capsules; that decree ordered him to pay the costs of the suit, £182, and also to pay over the amount of profits made in the course of his business; the latter part of the decree had not been fulfilled, and an order had been made by the Master ordering him to file accounts, and a further order by the Court that the enquiry be continued for the purpose of taking accounts. He sold a large quantity of this spurious brandy; he did not make large profits upon it. He could not say how much he paid for the brandy. It was not made up to his directions, but by his manager and cellarman, who died two weeks ago. He purchased a great deal of illicit spirit for the purpose of fortifying hop bitters in which he dealt largely. He paid about 16s. per gallon for this spirit. He could not say which brandy was put in Hennessy's bottles, nor how much it cost, but he sold it at 73s. per case. He got an overdraft of £2000 at the A. J. S. Bank, for which Mr. Spark became guarantee. He did not pay the larger amount of that to one of the Kidman's. The £940 paid into the bank at that time was trust monies, which he was indebted to the Kidman's estate. He collected rents for the estates of Charles and James Kidman, W. H. Hinton, J. B. Hinton, Mrs. Kidman, Mrs. Hinton, and Mrs. See, and he paid the monies received into the banks to the credit of the various estates except in the case of Mrs. Kidman, and to her he handed the money personally. He had not settled up all the balances finally, nor had he made any settlements since the commencement of the proceedings in Equity or in Bankruptcy. The bankrupt was ordered to comply with Rule 138 within 10 days after the service of the order, and the public examination was adjourned till August 2.

EXAMINATIONS OF WITNESSES.

Re William Sharp. Mr. Hanbury Davis, on behalf of the official assignee, appeared to examine Abraham Cohen. The witness stated that he lived in Sydney and was a financier; prior to a month ago he lived in Young and was an hotelkeeper; he knew the bankrupt, who borrowed £525 from him on September 29, upon a promissory note endorsed by Mr. Bell, the manager of the Young branch of the Bank of New South Wales; the bill fell due on January 1, 1888, and it was renewed at various dates afterwards; he never heard that Sharp was in financial difficulties; he never inquired at the bank because he was always satisfied with the endorsements. The examination was concluded.

Re J. P. Higgins and P. J. Murphy. The examination of witnesses in this matter was adjourned till August 2.

METROPOLITAN DISTRICT COURT.

Wednesday, June 26.

(Before his Honor Mr. District Court Judge Wilkinson.)

FRIDDY V. DOWNIE.

In this action Mr. W. Blackett (instructed by Mr. J. C. Thorn) appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Healy (instructed by Messrs. Curtis and Barry) represented the defendant. The action was brought by George Friddy, of Sydney, and Herbert Gibson, now in England, against Andrew Downie, of Sydney. Plaintiffs sued the defendant for that they by deed let to him certain premises, numbers 175 and 177, Castlereagh-street, Sydney, for seven years, dating from January 1st, 1882. In the same deed defendant covenanted at the end, or before the determination of, the term to peaceably deliver up the premises in good tenantable condition. Defendant, however, did not, at the expiration of the term, deliver up the premises as stipulated, and plaintiffs therefore claimed £53 11s. 8d. as damage.

Evidence was heard for the plaintiffs, and, at the rising of the Court, the cause stood as part heard.

POLICE.

Mr. W. Johnson, S.M., presided in the Charge Division at the Central Police Court yesterday morning. William Henry Warren, 28, a clerk, was charged with fraudulently appropriating to his own use the sum of £1, the property of Peter James Shoppie. Accused was remanded for a week. William Murray, 35, no occupation, was charged with having a carriage lamp in his possession reasonably suspected to be stolen. Accused was remanded till Monday. Nellie Beattie, 25, no occupation, was charged with assaulting one Emily Williams in a violent manner. Accused was fined £5, or in default two months, with hard labour. Minnie Kennedy, 24, was charged with maliciously injuring a night-tub to the extent of 3s. 6d., the property of the Government. Accused was ordered to pay the value of the tub, 3s. 6d., and a fine of 5s., or go to gaol for two days. Alfred Collyer, 20, was charged with assaulting Lavinia Hedger. Prosecutrix deposed that she lived in Bay-street, Glebe, and that prisoner came to her place on Thursday last, burst the door open, and struck her in the face, swearing at her all the time. She had originally lived in Gipps-street, Paddington, and the prisoner had been constantly following her since she had moved into her present residence. His Worship ordered that the accused should pay a fine of £5, or go to gaol for two months. Thomas Johnson, 13, was charged with assaulting a Chinaman named Ah Sam, in Abercrombie-street, Darlington. Prosecutor deposed that he was on his way home to Castlereagh-street, and was in Abercrombie-street, in his cart, when the accused with some other boys threw stones at him, hitting him in the side and back. Accused was ordered to pay 10s., or go to gaol for 21 days. John Warenken, on remand, was charged with obtaining the sum of £8 from Albert Donnell by means of false pretences. Constable Cook deposed that he had accused in custody at the Redfern Police Station, and there charged him with the offence. Albert Donnell deposed that he was visited by accused, who told him he was in trouble, and asked him to pay some money on a bill of sale for furniture he had obtained on the time-payment system. Donnell paid the money, on prisoner representing that the furniture was his own property. The accused was sentenced to three months, with hard labour. Warenken was further charged with obtaining the sum of 15s. from James Cook by means of false pretences. For this offence he was sentenced to three months, with hard labour. Mr. T. K. Abbott, S.M., dealt with the business in the Summons Division. Albert Jenkins was fined 40s., with the option of 21 days in gaol, for having caused a horse to be worked whilst in an unfit condition. F. C. Thornwaite was ordered to pay a fine of £6 and costs, in default two months' imprisonment, for having committed a breach of the municipal bylaws of Five Dock, in having allowed three horses to wander about the streets after receiving warning not to allow his stock to stray on the public thoroughfares. Mr. Evans, the inspector of weights and measures, proceeded against several persons for having committed breaches of the Coal Act. Charles Bourke was fined £1, with the option of one week in gaol, for not carrying a weighing machine on his cart, in accordance with the provisions of the Act; and a like penalty was awarded to Alfred Parry. For a similar offence, James M'Ash and David Jones were each fined 40s., in default 14 days in gaol. The last-named defendant was mulcted in further a penalty for not causing a ticket to be delivered to the customer, as required by the Act. James Slattery was fined £5, with the alternative of two months in gaol, for having neglected to carry a weighing machine on his vehicle. James M'Auliffe was committed to stand his trial on a charge of stealing five bags of chaff. The evidence given was to the effect that the defendant had been employed to cart a consignment of chaff from the steamer Gabo, lying at Smith's wharf, to P. R. Larkins' depot in Gipps-street. Doubts had previously been entertained with regard to his honesty, and a watch was kept on his movements, to, if possible, detect any irregularity. It was alleged that after loading two drays with the chaff defendant proceeded to Redfern, where he kept a small shop, and there discharged five of the bags, and subsequently on checking his delivery at the depot six bags were found to be missing.

Mr. B. Lee, D.S.M., presided in the Charge Division of the Water Police Court, and Mr. A. M. Fisher, S.M., dealt with a large number of cases in the Petty Debts Division. Julius Destrand, 26, labourer, was fined 20s., or seven days in gaol, for behaving in a riotous manner in the bar of the Port Jackson Hotel. Robert Thompson, 42, labourer, was ordered to be imprisoned for three months, with hard labour, on a charge of being found in the caretaker's residence at the Sydney Grammar School, Stanley-street, for an unlawful purpose, to wit, to steal. An athlete named James Nolen, 28 years of age, was charged with stealing the sum of £30, the property of Henry Sharpe. It was stated that the money was stolen from the Pacific Hotel, No. 77, George-street North. The accused was remanded until Tuesday next.

Mr. O'Malley Clarke, S.M., presided at the Newtown Police Court. Henry Kirkland, on remand, was charged by warrant with fraudulently embezzling the sum of 3s. 9d., received by him on account of Sydney Ruddock. It appears that accused was a milk deliverer in the employ of the prosecutor. On the 3rd of June he collected a bill of 3s. 9d. from Mr. Stark, draper, Parramatta-road, Leichhardt, but did not furnish any account of it. Accused, who elected to be summarily dealt with, and who pleaded not guilty, was sentenced to one month's imprisonment. Mary Hukins, 60, a married woman, was charged, by warrant, with attempting to commit suicide. On the 20th instant Dr. Hodson was called in to accused's residence, Edwin-street, Croydon, and found her lying on her right side on a bed. A large pool of blood was on the floor. He found on the left arm two incised wounds about four inches in length. She then appeared dead. He stopped the bleeding, administered restoratives, and in two or three minutes she came round. The wounds were inflicted with a small pair of scissors. For about three nights previous Mrs. Hukins had been nursing, and had had no sleep. Accused was committed for trial at the next court of Quarter Sessions. Bail herself in one surety of £25.

Mr. Benjamin Lee, D.S.M., disposed of the business of the Balmain Police Court. Charles Cherry and Francis M'Keown, charged with having insufficient lawful means of support, were each ordered to be imprisoned three months. Patrick Reilly, for being drunk and disorderly, was fined 20s., with the option of seven days in gaol. Richard Edwards, Charles Hall, and Robert Turner, for a similar offence, were each fined 10s., with the alternative of three days' imprisonment. Andrew M'Hugh was granted a pawnbroker's license.

Messrs. H. Byrnes and E. Ellison, J.s.P., disposed of the business at the Parramatta Police Court on Wednesday morning. Arthur Bramwell was fined 40s., and 4s. 10d. costs of court, for allowing a horse to be worked while in an unfit state. The person who used the horse had been previously fined. George Smith, on the complaint of James M'Keown, the Cumberland Crown lands ranger, was fined £4, one guinea professional costs, and 5s. 6d. costs of court, for unlawfully cutting timber on Crown lands. The prosecutor pressed for the highest penalty, as some of the reserves had been thoroughly worked through by woodcutters.

ENGLISH ART IN AUSTRALIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—All lovers of art, and those who desire to improve the art-taste of the community, will, I am sure, cordially endorse the hope expressed by your correspondent "R. F. A." that the necessary guarantees will be forthcoming to secure to Sydney, in conjunction with the other colonies, an annual exhibition of works of modern British art. In Melbourne, which invariably takes the lead in all such matters, the scheme was so warmly taken up by Mr. Murray Smith and other prominent citizens, that in less than 48 hours guarantees for a considerable more than was required were forthcoming. In Adelaide the scheme having been strongly advocated by the press, and earnestly taken up in very influential quarters, is sure to be carried through. It will certainly be a reproach to Sydney if amongst its many wealthy citizens ten or more cannot be found prepared to guarantee the small sum of £500 to participate in a movement which, whether this colony joins in it or not, is certain to be carried out.

I am, &c., E. L. M.

Mr. W. M'Sherry has just finished, to the order of Mr. A. H. M'Arthur, an oil-painting of the racehorse Fernandez, and the artist has to be complimented on the spirited and life-like picture of the son of Robinson Crusoe.

Liverpool Turf Club race meeting has been granted registration by the A. J. C. authorities.

On Tuesday the committee of the Sydney Driving Park Club, Limited, dealt with the protests entered by Mr. H. Knight against the horses Commander and Laughing Stock taking part in the 2.55 trot at the last meeting held under the auspices of that institution, on the ground that in both instances better records had been made. After a lengthy investigation Commander and his owner were disqualified for a period of 12 months under rule 14 of the S. D. P. C., and the mare Laughing Stock was disqualified for one month to meet the requirements of the second section of the same rule. An inquiry into the running of Slippery in the Handicap Pony Race was also held, but the evidence adduced was of such a nature as to exonerate the owner from any suspicion of malpractice, though the rider was cautioned to be more careful in future.

Word comes from Liverpool to the effect that the extensive stables at Warwick Farm, the residence of Mr. William Forrester, were totally destroyed by fire between 9 and 10 o'clock on Wednesday night. When the alarm was given the fire had a strong hold on the building, and the flames were breaking out through the roof; but, under the direction of Mr. Forrester, the valuable horses that occupied the boxes were all safely removed from the building, though showers of sparks and burning cinders were falling in all directions. The occupants of the boxes included Bonnie Doon, Burrilda, Dalley, Quartz, Richworth, Southerly Buster, and Yellow Jacket, besides a number of fashionably-bred youngsters. Mr. Forrester's intimate knowledge of equine instincts enabled him at the critical moment to adopt the proper method of saving the stock, for, though the doors were open, the horses refused to move until they were led out. The stables, which were second only to those belonging to the Hon. James White, were built throughout of wood, fitted with all the modern improvements, and provided accommodation for about a score of horses. Forage to the value of between £400 and £500 was also destroyed, and though the buildings were covered by insurance the loss will still be considerable. The greatest sympathy is expressed in sporting circles for Mr. Forrester, who for years past has had a persistent run of ill-luck.

Creeper, who has distinguished himself as a selling-plater on the metropolitan courses, has, in company with Eulbertie, returned to the Mudgee district; and Mr. Turnbull, of Lithgow, has also sent his pair—The Fareham and The Oaks—to the same locality for a spell.

Among the malcontents for the principal handicaps in connection with the Clarence River Jockey Club annual races is the Richmond River representative Sirius, whose absence from the lists of candidates indicates that there is something seriously wrong with the son of Rainsworth.

Advices from America state that the Latonia Derby, 1½ mile, was won by the favourite, Hindoocraft, who started at 6 to 5 against, and covered the distance in 2 minutes 41¾ seconds.

Latest sporting files from England contain the handicaps for the Manchester Cup, in which the Australian candidate, Ringmaster, was apportioned 8st. 3lb., the top weight of 9st. 7lb. having been assigned to Goldseeker.

Sporting Life (England) is responsible for the statement that Orbit, by Bend Or from Fair Alice, has been sold by the Duke of Westminster to Lord W. Beresford for 3000 guineas, and will be forwarded to India by his new owner. Orbit has, during the last two seasons, credited the Duke of Westminster with £12,683 in stakes, of which £10,000 was gained by his victory in the Eclipse Stakes.

The race for the Newmarket Stakes of 7500 sovs., 1¼ mile, of which the result was furnished by cable at the time, was run on May 22, at the Newmarket (Eng.) Second Spring meeting, and attracted 16 starters, as follows:—Donovan, by Galopin—Mowerina, 1; Laureate, by Petrarch—Macaria, 2; The Turcophone, by Galopin—Lady Mar, 3; Enthusiast, Papyrus, Oriel, Evergreen, Royal Star, Wishing Gate, Gay Hampton, Houndsditch, Gulliver, Gold, Cherry Bounce, Minthe, Arquebus, and Tom Crib. Donovan was favourite at 11 to 8, while Enthusiast had friends at 100 to 30, Gulliver at 100 to 9, Gay Hampton and Minthe at 100 to 8, Laureate at 100 to 7, and The Turcophone at 100 to 1. The favourite, who was ridden by F. Barrett, did not appear prominently in the race until the last quarter of a mile had to be negotiated, when he went to the front and won in a canter by two lengths from The Turcophone, who defeated Laureate by a head for second place, and the journey was accomplished in 2 minutes 17⅖ seconds.

THE DRINK BILL OF NEW SOUTH WALES FOR 1888.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I congratulate Mr. J. P. T. Caulfield on the more moderate tone of his letter in your Tuesday's issue; but he has again fallen into errors, to which I will very briefly refer. He thinks the drink bill of £4,777,168 an exaggeration, and in support says I should have placed the price of the colonial beer at 2s. a gallon instead of 3s. He looks, however, only at the metropolitan price. Sydney is not New South Wales. In the country districts generally the price is 4s. per gallon. Sixpenny drinks are usual all through the interior. The fact is, I have rather underestimated the total than otherwise. I have taken the official returns mainly from the Custom House, and have made no allowance whatever for dilution by spirit-merchants and publicans when the drinks pass through their hands. Mr. Caulfield is unfair as to the number of convictions for drunkenness last year. He states them as 14,991. He omits all the cases of drunkenness with disorderly conduct, and includes those for drunkenness only, but for what reason I cannot tell. These were 9763, and I was careful to include them in the figures I quoted. Assertions of the kind must lessen the reliance placed in future on any of his statements.

The only other point I think it necessary to refer to is as to the remedies Mr. Caulfield says I advocate to reduce this extravagant drink bill. I have never urged the extreme measures he mentions. I do not wish to see any legislation in advance of public opinion. Politically, I believe that the full right of local option should be conceded the people, and that open bars should not remain forced—ay, forced—upon any neighbourhood. This just principle of local self-government has been adopted by resolution in the Legislative Assembly by a large majority, and I regard it as a great wrong to the colony that it is not passed into law. The remedy for intemperance should wholly rest with the people in each locality, who, I am confident, would wisely use their powers.

I am, &c.,

THE YASS TRAMWAY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—"Courier" is quite correct in pointing out the mistake made by "Truth" in omitting to mention that "the principal parties urging the construction of the Yass tramway are a few property-owners." It would have been well had he stopped there, for he himself makes a far greater mistake when he says that "the proper place for the terminus is near the Public school." When there was some promise of the town going ahead, the present site of the railway station was determined upon by the Government as being suitable. Now, I ask, should public money be expended on an insignificant country town that has so signally failed to fulfil any promise of progress. When this station site was decided upon a few property-owners, true to the instinct of their class, which wants the railway "agin its own door," viewed, in baffled rage and disappointment, that "the time should come." Accordingly they have waited, with only an occasional irrepressible reference to their grievance. Now that they think the time has come, they are determined to make it as good a one as is consistent with their modesty. One party only requires £20,000, while the other asks a trifling £4000. I quite agree with "Courier" that it is "a matter for the country, and not for a few self-interested Yass people." I most positively assert that, if the country were better acquainted with Yass and its inhabitants, it would simply echo Mrs. Guppy's vigorous "get out." "Courier" sees the case in its proper light when he writes, "No private company in the world would entertain the suggestion to carry the tram . . . . as is now proposed." And further, "The majority of Yass residents would be satisfied with a tram or light railway." It is well they are practising self-denial thus early, as that virtue will be put to a severer test yet if the Government is as vigilant of the public money as it professes to be.

June 26. Yours, &c., BOYTHORN.

CRAWLING CABS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Since correspondence re crawling cabs commenced I have taken notice of the complained nuisance. In fact, I had to take notice, as I was nearly run down by them. They sometimes appear in twos, and when you see one and clear it, the second is upon you. Even to-night, in crossing Liverpool-street at Pitt-street, I was nearly run down by one, and only escaped by the cabman's crying out. It was coming along so slowly that I could not see nor hear it in time, or only just in time, and I think it ought to be put a stop to. I think myself that the policemen are the best at regulating crossing traffic. In London an empty cab dare not move about, and I have known a friend of mine who has been asked to go into a cab so that the cabby could drive a few streets down in the Strand. My friend accepted in order to oblige, and I had to wait till he returned. Your correspondent of the other day, who seems so selfish as to argue for his own convenience against the danger of the public, might send for his cab or walk the short distance to a cab-stand even if he is so frightened or unwilling to walk.

I am, &c., NON-CAB HIRER.

THE CITY RAILWAY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The very great importance of the subject is my excuse for asking you to grant me a little more space to refer to this city railway. Since you published my last, many correspondents have addressed you; but they have, with but one or two exceptions, I think, shot very wide of the mark. Some have reiterated the stock argument that the city has plenty of parks; one made a tilt at the legal aspect of the question, and seems to have considered he has demolished all opposition by his efforts to prove that the Government could legally resume the park. No one denies it.

In my last I described a portion of the scheme which it is alleged the Commissioners wish to adopt, and which is now under the consideration of the Cabinet. With your permission I will detail the proposal more completely.

The line is to be brought across the old cemetery and over the Belmore Gardens by an arched viaduct. This will utterly and entirely destroy the Gardens. We had an archway on a small scale in Prince Alfred Park, constructed at the time of the 1870 Exhibition, but such a positive nuisance did it prove that the Municipal Council demolished it and lowered the roadway.

From the Belmore Gardens the arched viaduct will continue over Campbell-street and Foster-street till it reaches level ground at Goulburn-street. Very recently the corporation and Government expended a considerable sum of money in opening Goulburn-street to the Surry Hills, so important was the street for traffic. Now it is to be absolutely closed in its most vital part, by the railway lines crossing it on its own level. Of course, the property owners will require to be compensated.

From Goulburn-street to Liverpool-street property will have to be purchased to enable the lines to pass through a cutting to the park. At Liverpool-street, near the Unitarian Church, this cutting will be spanned by a bridge. The lines will proceed through an open cutting 70ft. wide to beyond Bathurst-street.

At Park-street the cutting is so shallow that Mr. Whitton found it impossible to bridge it, and his only alternative was to close that street. Soon after passing Park-street the lines reach the park level, and so continue to the terminus. The station buildings will extend from King-street to beyond Market-street. Here, therefore, is another thoroughfare to be closed, and it is a thoroughfare along which there is daily an immense pedestrian traffic from morning to night. It may be remarked, in answer to Sir William Manning's observations, that this particular part of the park has been the least improved, because the ground was wanted for election purposes.

To make up to some extent for the closing of Park-street, Mr. Whitton proposed that a new road should be cut through Hyde Park, to debouch on Elizabeth-street, nearly opposite Bathurst-street. Mr. Whitton's intention was, I understand, to take advantage of the rising ground in this portion of the park to get sufficient headway for a bridge across the railway. The hill up from William-street to College-street is so steep as to make it very awkward for traffic; and yet vehicles are to be taken still higher. How they will descend from the bridge to Elizabeth-street is one of those mysteries the solution of which remains for the Commissioners to proclaim. The traffic up William-street, I may say, is greatly increasing day by day, as the Woolloomooloo Bay is being more extensively used.

But here is one important fact I want to bring out. Between Bathurst-street on the south and King-street on the north—a distance of nearly half-a-mile—all avenues of traffic between East Sydney (as represented by Woolloomooloo, Darlinghurst, &c.) and West Sydney are to be absolutely closed; and Goulburn-street, if not Foster-street, is also to be closed. Ornamental iron bridges have been spoken of. But as the railway is nearly level with the Park for the whole distance north of Bathurst-street, it is obvious that no bridges can be constructed—unless such as are used at suburban stations—and indeed Mr. Whitton did not propose to have any such bridges north of Bathurst-street.

The Park holds a unique position. Its value for recreation and ordinary park purposes offers an insuperable objection to its being taken for a railway. Its value as a great avenue of traffic, covered as it is with a network of thoroughfares, is even greater than its value as a park.

The Commissioners, we are told, merely want to take one-third of the Park as an instalment. But almost in the same breath they say the time is near at hand when Waverley, Paddington, and other eastern suburbs will require railway accommodation, and the Park would be a convenient centre to start an eastern railway from. Then, of course, would go at least another third of the Park, and the avenue of trees, and other avenues, which it is now declared are not to be touched, would be meddled with in a most disastrous manner.

This question of closing thoroughfares is a most serious one. Last week a deputation asked the Minister for Works to expend money in opening Albion-street from Bourke-street to Botany-street—not a very busy part of the city—but the Minister had to admit the importance of opening fresh avenues of traffic whenever practicable.

In your Paris correspondent's letter published in your issue of Tuesday, it is stated that the streets of Paris are so densely crowded with all kinds of vehicles going at all possible paces, and crossing and interlocking one another in every direction, that bones are broken and lives lost every day. Our streets are now pretty well crowded, and yet we have the cool proposal made to close up three or four of the most important of them, and those which connect two great divisions of the city, and thoroughfares, too, which are more urgently needed as the weeks go by. What will King-street be with the immense vehicular traffic to and from the station, in addition to the ordinary traffic, which the street almost now fails to accommodate? What accommodation will there be for pedestrians, who will perforce have to use it, if the other thoroughfares now existing across the park are closed?

It is argued that this usurpation of the park is demanded by the public—but, so far as I have been able to gather, that public is represented by that portion of it which has been furnished with railway accommodation and conveniences for coming into the city. It is not intended to bring the country traffic to the proposed new terminus; to bring that traffic to Hyde Park would be a fatal mistake. Not alone will there be a large amount of property to purchase south of the park, but compensation will have to be paid to the owners of the very valuable buildings along the western side of Elizabeth-street, for those properties will assuredly suffer from the smoke, noise, and vibration of a railway within a few yards of them.

As Mr. Hoskins pointed out in the Council, this extension could never prove anything but a dead loss. All the Government would have to depend on would be the difference of traffic between the present tram traffic and the increased traffic by the line. A great part of what you put on to the railway you take off the tramway. What the railway would gain, the tramway, which was built at great cost, would lose. I could say much more, but fear to trespass on your space. Thanking you in anticipation,

I am, &c.,
June 25. WOOLLOOMOOLOO.

CHARITY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Those who are comfortably housed, clothed, and fed, take a heavy responsibility when they cry down charity as the means of pauperising and demoralising. There cannot be too searching inquiry before affording relief. No one in their senses would advocate indiscriminate charity; but is it not true that much, if not most, of the poverty and misery that exists is attributable to the intemperance of husbands? Punish the guilty by all means, but do not let the innocent suffer with them. In many instances a woman struggles on, submitting to all the horrors of an intemperate husband, either from the fear of his making her suffer all the more afterwards should she seek redress; or if she has no actual violence to complain of, she thinks she will be little benefited by the interference of the law, for it is easy for a man to evade an order for maintenance; and imprisoning him under the present system does not help her, for while he is in prison she and her family are starving just the same. Who is to blame these women if they throw themselves on public institutions, especially in cases of sickness? Yet many say these unfortunates have no right to expect assistance because their husbands drink. Before raising the cry of over-much charity, would it not be better to see if anything can be done to improve the condition of these poor creatures? Would it not be possible to make habitual drunkenness a criminal offence? Let the law take the responsibility out of those poor helpless women's hands, and let a habitual drunkard be watched and punished like any other criminal, but do not imprison the man and leave the family to starve. Make him work hard during his imprisonment and allow him such wage as may be deemed expedient, and let this go to support his wife and family, taking care at the same time to make the man's prison life a sufficiently severe experience as to preclude the possibility of his voluntarily seeking it. It is strange that the law can do so little (except in theory) to protect women from the tortures which a drunken husband can inflict. If it could be more practical in the matter, one cause of pauperism at least might be abolished. If, on the other hand, the misery caused to women and children by intemperance is an evil which cannot be dealt with by law (though one would think an evil so terrible ought to find a remedy), then let the fact be recognised that there is a stupendous amount of undeserved poverty to be dealt with, and instead of disheartening would-be helpers let it be acknowledged that there cannot be too much discriminating charity or too many charitable institutions. Judging by what one hears at the Charity Organisation Society and the Benevolent Asylum, the supply falls lamentably short of the demand, yet both institutions exercise the utmost vigilance to ensure that the funds are not wasted on the undeserving.

I am, &c., CHARITY.

THE SYDNEY MAIL.

THE LARGEST ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY NEWSPAPER PUBLISHED IN AUSTRALASIA.

THE ISSUE FOR JUNE 29 contains, amongst other illustrations, the following:—

THE COLLIERY DISASTER AT NEWCASTLE.

The terrible Colliery Disaster at Newcastle, by which a number of men have been entombed for several days, has been the all-absorbing topic of the week. In a series of excellent sketches our artist has depicted the scene of the catastrophe, the anxious crowds at the pit's mouth, the entrance to the fatal pit, &c. These sketches will, no doubt, be regarded with melancholy interest, but they will serve to convey an idea of the locality in which the accident occurred.

THE LATE HON. JOHN SUTHERLAND.

This is, undoubtedly, one of the best portraits ever published in the mail. Those who knew Mr. Sutherland—and who did not!—will acknowledge the faithful portraiture. Those who desire to be possessed of a portrait of this greatly honoured colonist, will do well to secure a copy of the MAIL, which, in addition to both portraits, contains a full biographical notice of the deceased gentleman.

MUNICIPAL REPRESENTATIVES.

Three portraits are given in this week's MAIL of Mayoral Representatives, viz., Mr. E. Eyles, Mayor of Orange; Mr. John A. Rose, Mayor of Parkes; and Mr. S. Foley, Mayor of Five Dock. They are excellent likenesses.

NEW ZEALAND AND SOUTH SEAS EXHIBITION.

This week's MAIL contains a large engraving of the building now in course of erection for the New Zealand and South Seas Exhibition, which is to be opened in Dunedin in November next. The objects of the Exhibition are fully set forth in the accompanying letterpress.

THE GENEVA CROSS IN CHINA.

The Chinese, in their desire for military progress, have instituted in their country the order of the Geneva Cross. Our illustration shows the first ambulance, which was recently inspected by the Commander-in-Chief of the Army, Li Hung Chang.

THE CITY OF LAUNCESTON, TASMANIA.

In a double-page series of splendid Engravings, we depict some of the principal points of the important city of Launceston, Tasmania. Amongst the views are the following:—A general view of the city, Paterson-street, Frederick-street, Chalmers' Church, Christ Church, High School, Mechanics' Institute, General Post Office, Town Hall, Custom-house, Reed's Church. The pictures are well drawn and splendidly engraved, and give bright and animated views of the place.

FASHIONS.

Illustrations of Cuirass Valois bodice, a morning costume, and a demi-toilette bodice.

THE TENTS OF SHEM.

A beautiful and characteristic engraving accompanies the chapters of this very popular tale, which is continued in this week's MAIL.

THURSDAY, JUNE 27, 1889.

THE situation at the Newcastle disaster remains unchanged. The rescue party is working heroically, but up to last night had not succeeded in releasing or recovering any of the entombed miners. Lord Carrington yesterday visited the scene, and descended the pit. He also visited the homes of the men whose fates are yet uncertain, and condoled with the relatives.

LORD CARRINGTON said that from what he saw in the mine he was satisfied that every possible effort was being made to rescue the unhappy men, and that all hope had not yet been abandoned. He was struck by one noble feature in his visit to the homes of the wives and families, and it was that in the depths of their great grief and sorrow there was not one word of complaint from them. Their hearts were palpably broken, but they exhibited great resignation, courage, and fortitude in their awfully painful surroundings.

IF, said the Governor, speaking at Newcastle, there ever were heroes, the rescuers fighting their way through fallen rock, amidst imminent risk and danger, ranked pre-eminently among them. He hoped, by the blessing of God Almighty, that no such catastrophe would ever again happen.

We referred yesterday to the transfer of Sir HENRY LOCH as Governor from Victoria to the Cape, where he is to be the successor of Sir HERCULES ROBINSON. There are some other points in connection with these transactions which are of interest under present circumstances. The Governorship of the Cape, coupled as it is with the High Commissionership of the outlying dependencies, is an office of high importance and dignity, although it is not so well paid as that of Victoria, yet it went a-begging. Rumour has it that the appointment was offered to a dozen or fifteen persons and declined. At last Sir HENRY LOCH, who had been one of the number, accepts it as a matter of duty, which is practically equivalent to saying by command. An officer in the naval or military service must obey orders. The situation is not precisely the same in the Colonial Department. The offer of a new appointment to a Governor in the service is not ordinarily the exact counterpart to instructions issued to an Admiral in command of a fleet; but in such cases as the one before us, the refusal of the offer would, to the recipient of it, be at least a fatal mistake. When offers are made to noblemen or gentlemen not in the service, they can act with greater freedom, because they have not the fear of sacrificing a position and standing won perhaps by years of work.

There are some special reasons why the high office held by the Governor at the Cape may fail to be attractive. He has, in administering the affairs of that particular colony, to deal with a responsible Ministry relying upon the support of local opinion. Outside the Cape it is his duty, as High Commissioner, to give effect to the policy of the Imperial Government. The position is one, therefore, of peculiar delicacy and difficulty; and the occupant of it is liable to find himself between two fires. But this is not all. Imperial policy in South Africa has been uncertain, if not capricious. One Ministry coming into office in England undoes the work which another had begun. A Governor who lives through more than one Ministerial régime may feel the consequences of the change hard to bear, and, as experience has shown, in the conscientious discharge of what he believes to be his duty he is not sure of support. There are many men who would willingly face any amount of responsibility and hard work; but, as the facts have indicated, it is not everybody who will readily accept an ambiguous position. A certain amount of ambiguity attaches to the office of Governor where reponsible Government prevails. The holder of it represents the Crown, but is not in the position of the Crown. He is under instructions, and yet he may be snubbed or thrown overboard for carrying them into effect. But at the Cape there is the additional source of embarrassment which the High Commissionership implies.

It is clearly becoming a more difficult thing to fill up vacant Governorships than it was years ago. But, with the march of events now, questions are arising in regard to the limits within which these officers of the State, when appointed, may speak and act. Questions affecting the integrity of the Empire are being discussed with greater freedom than before. Communities that once were small are growing in importance and in self-consciousness, and their tone is undergoing a change. To what that change may lead is a subject of speculation and free debate. Under such conditions the position of a colonial Governor is one that should above all things be judiciously filled. If he resemble the figures of Chinese mandarins which used to adorn the windows of the grocers' shops, his mechanical noddings of the head will not satisfy the requirements of the times. If he show a disposition to interfere unduly with the course of public affairs, and to place himself too much in evidence as the representative of Imperial authority, he will have to travel on a rough path, and probably he will not be thanked by the Minister to whom he is responsible for his pains. If he underestimate his obligations as an Imperial officer, and become, consciously or unconsciously the exponent of local opinions or desires tending logically towards the abolition of Imperial rule, he exposes himself to the risk of being informed, authoritatively, that he has mistaken his functions or forgotten his place. In such a Governorship as that of the Cape, there is no room for an office who cannot avoid all these extremes. Sir HENRY LOCH's appointment has been approved in England, because he has acquired a reputation for discretion and tact.

Sir HERCULES ROBINSON's retirement from the offices he had filled and also from the Colonial service was attributed by the SECRETARY of STATE to the fact that the Imperial Government had been unable to promise to support him in his views upon the South African question without discussing the whole situation. If we are to understand from this that the question was whether the Imperial policy in South Africa should be determined by the officer sent out to administer South African affairs or by the Government that appointed him, it is hard to see how any other conclusion could, under the circumstances, have been reached. The ultimate responsibility for the good government of South Africa rests not with Governors, but with the SECRETARY of STATE or the Ministry of which he is a member, and where the ultimate responsibility is, there must be the final control. Sir HERCULES ROBINSON's resignation shows his confidence in the soundness of his own views, and his conscientiousness in adhering to them at so considerable a cost. The acceptance of his resignation was inevitable, nevertheless, when the Government held other views. But it is a question of interest whether this explanation of the business, though it be correct so far as it goes, covers all the facts. It is not to be forgotten that the late Governor, before leaving the Cape, made a remarkable speech, in the course of which he expressed the opinion that the tendencies of the colonies were in the direction of the decay of Imperial authority, and of the strengthening of the cause of republicanism and independence. Endeavours were afterwards made to cast doubt upon the accuracy of the report or to minimise the effect of the statement; but, unless these were effectual, it can easily be understood that at least the resignation of office by Sir HERCULES was accepted without regret.

It would be a mistake to hold that the Governor of a British colony must never venture to express his candid opinions before the public. There are occasions on which such candour may produce beneficent effects. Some remarks made by Sir HERCULES ROBINSON when in this colony upon the need for greater rapidity in the extension of our railway system have sometimes been supposed to have given a new stimulus to the enterprise. But be this as it may, the justification of free speech on certain occasions does not imply indiscriminate authority for it upon all. Whatever else a Governor may be, he is primarily the representative of Imperial authority. Deprive him of that function, and his occupation would be gone. There would be no reason for his presence in the colony to which he had been sent. It cannot be compatible with his obligations to say or do anything publicly that would tend even indirectly to undermine and weaken the authority he represents. He may conscientiously believe that the days of that authority are passing away, and that another order of things is at hand. If so, it is his duty to place his opinions and the grounds for them before the Government whose interests he was appointed to watch over and protect. He should do this with all the clearness and force at his command. But before the public he is bound to be as to this matter the guardian of Imperial authority and rights; and he cannot be justified even in the recognition publicly of what he may regard as tendencies by which they may be destroyed, unless it be for the avowed and manifest purposes of warning and resistance.

Judging from the drift of the debate on the Payment of Members Bill in the Council last night, the measure has a far better chance of becoming law than it ever had before. The principle still meets with disapproval, but members who voted against the bill on former occasions now announce their intention of voting for it, on the ground that the country has taken the matter out of their hands. This point was well put by Dr. GARRAN. The Council, he says, can only ascertain the wishes of the country by observing what representatives are returned to the Assembly; and it is apparent that the number of members pledged to the principle has increased after every general election. He notices, too, that there was a marked increase after the last general election, when, for the first time, the question was submitted to the country as part of the Ministerial manifesto. In view of these facts Dr. GARRAN considers that it is not the duty of the Council to offer any further resistance. And the same opinion was expressed by members who followed him. Others saw no reason to alter their attitude, but were confirmed in their opposition by the threats which had been made use of in another place. We pointed out at the time that the inconsiderate language used in the Assembly on the second reading of the bill was likely to do harm, and the result justifies the prediction. The House, however, did not seem inclined to attach undue importance to what had been said in the other Chamber, but dealt with the question in a calm and dignified way that did it much credit.

But while there seemed to be a disposition to pass the bill as representing with tolerable fidelity the wishes of the people, it was made apparent that, whether the second reading is carried or not, the Council will not agree to the measure in its present shape. The provision which applies the measure to the existing Assembly was strongly objected to. In the opinion of some members the bill is unconstitutionally before Parliament for the reasons suggested in the Herald article of June 20. The members of the Assembly, it was argued, are directly interested in a pecuniary sense in the measure, for it not only proposes to make payment of members applicable to the present Assembly, but provision is made for back pay. "Unconstitutional" and "indecent" were some of the expressions used to describe the action of the Assembly in thus proposing to obtain direct and immediate profit from the bill. If the measure is passed by the Council, a proviso will be inserted, postponing its operation until after the election of the next Parliament. The constituencies having sent into the Assembly such a large number of members who avowed themselves as supporters of the principle, the conclusion that the country is willing to pay its representatives can hardly be avoided; and if that view is accepted, the Council could not in reason throw out the bill. But, as was pointed out in the course of the debate, the question "Shall the members of this Parliament be paid for their services?" was never submitted to the constituencies. The question was put in the abstract form, the argument being that if a Payment of Members Bill were passed the people would have a wider choice in the selection of representatives. Now, as the last election took place under the old conditions, it is obvious that the country would obtain no advantage from paying the members of the present House.

Mr. O'CONNOR, who thinks that the result of the last election should be accepted as a direction to the Council to pass the bill, proposes another limitation, viz., that the measure should only have force during the two next Parliaments, which would give it a life of six years at the outside. His view is, that as the country has had no experience of the working of a Payment of Members Act, an opportunity of reconsidering the matter should be given. This, Mr. O'CONNOR says, was the Victorian plan, but the hon. member did not state the case exactly. The Victorian Act in the first instance was a temporary one, and its operation was limited to three years, not six. There is something to be said in favour of this suggestion, and the Assembly could very well afford to adopt it. There is also force in the contention that if we have payment of members the Assembly should be thinned. That the country is over-represented there can be no doubt; and it was one of Dr. GARRAN's points that while most of the candidates who advocated payment of members at the general election were returned, nearly every one of them submitted the proposal to the electors with the understanding that there was to be a reduction in the membership of the Assembly. The House is certainly too large, but if it is to be reduced the reduction must be brought about by an amendment of the Electoral Act. Mr. BUCHANAN's proposal to insert a clause in the bill now before the Council, providing that payment of members shall not take effect until the number of representatives has been reduced to 80, could not possibly be accepted by the Assembly, because it would amount practically to the defeat of the bill.

One of the reasons advanced against the bill was the condition of the finances. "We have," it was said, "a deficit of £2,000,000, we have great difficulty, quite apart from that serious liability, in making both ends meet; and yet the Assembly, though fully aware of the position, proposes to take over £40,000 a year out of the public funds for the payment of its members." The objection is one of no little force, but it is raised at the wrong time. The state of the finances was well known when Mr. DIBBS put the Payment of Members question on his programme, but, as everyone must be aware, the constituencies, instead of raising their voice against the proposed appropriation, practically sanctioned it. The question for the Council now to consider is not whether Payment of Members is right or expedient; the point is, what is the opinion of the country? There was a tendency sometimes in last night's debate to wander from the point, but as a rule the true issue was kept prominently in view. It is well that this should be so, for on no other basis could the Council possibly arrive at a satisfactory conclusion.

The agitation for the validation of colonial securities for trust fund purposes in England is being continued by the representatives of the colonies. It seems that Lord HERSCHELL is favourable to the inclusion of such securities in the bill which he has again introduced into the House of Lords. It may be remembered that the plan previously suggested limited the stocks to be included to such as had a market value equivalent to £105 for 4 per cents. Now it would seem that his Lordship doubts the wisdom of adopting that as the standard. On what grounds his views are based we are not aware. When that standard was first suggested, some portion of the stocks of all or nearly all the Australian colonies might have been invested in for trust purposes. The credit of New Zealand has since so greatly improved that her 4 per cents have been up to 106, including accrued interest, and even these might have been available for the purposes of trustees. We may hope that Lord HERSCHELL will not insist on an unnecessarily high standard. There is much to be said in favour of Sir GRAHAM BERRY's suggestion to fix the standard by the price of Consols. To make a fixed limit of, say, £105 for 4 per cents., might be objectionable, on the ground that a stock which would be available for trust purposes when the money market was in a normal condition could not be invested in when money was dear. Yet the stock would be equally as trustworthy when from such a cause the price fell to £103. If, however, the suggestion of Sir GRAHAM BERRY were adopted such an objection would not lie, or at all events it would not lie to the same extent. The causes that lessen the value of colonial securities usually reduce the value of Consols. If, therefore, the standard of value of our securities for trust purposes were fixed on a basis relatively to the price of Consols, a cheap or a dear money market would probably not affect their value for trustee purposes. Colonial securities have been rapidly approximating in value to Consols. Forty years ago £100 in Consols yielded the investor as much as £155 in New South Wales stock. Now, £111 of our stock yields as much interest as £100 in Consols. Where we were 55 per cent. behind the mother-country, we are now only 11 per cent. behind. New Zealand, whose credit is the least satisfactory of all the Australasian colonies, is only 28 per cent. behind Great Britain. In other words, while Consols are yielding investors about £2 14s. per cent., Australasian securities return investors from about £3 5s., in the case of New South Wales and Victorian securities, to £3 16s. in the case of New Zealand stocks. No doubt the inclusion of our stocks in the favoured circle would promptly bring them into even a closer relation to Consols than they are at present, to the advantage of these communities, and we may therefore hope that the agitation will succeed.

The new regulations regarding the steamer traffic in Sydney Cove will have much importance in the eyes of the public. Within certain boundaries the steamers must not travel faster than six miles an hour. There is no doubt that the regulation has not been proclaimed without reason. The traffic to the North Shore and elsewhere, owing to the growth of the suburbs, is rapidly increasing, and the danger of steamers colliding is, therefore, the greater. But the traffic will go on increasing, and the question then arises whether the present rate will not have to be decreased also. The amount of steamer traffic concentrated at Circular Quay and in Darling Harbour is enormous, and the time is coming when we shall have to consider the distribution of the points of concentration. It is possible that we should even now face it. Reduction in the rate of speed to North Shore and elsewhere is a matter of vital importance to those who live at these places. Time is money, and a difference of two, three, or four minutes to Milson's Point, of five or six to Lavender Bay, and of ten minutes to Manly, if the new regulations should compel such a thing, would perplex a great many people, and might materially alter the development of these and other suburbs over the water. At the same time, we must have safety, and the step has not been taken, we are assured, without cause. At present the rate of travel is, we suppose, between seven and eight miles per hour. Six miles per hour is about half as fast again as a man can walk. The rate of travel henceforth, therefore, is a very moderate one, and it remains to be seen if the public will be satisfied with it. If not, the only recourse is to increase in the distributing points. The Marine Board are further providing for the safety of the public in compelling the harbour steamers to be constructed with watertight compartments, after the fashion of the large ocean steamers. The wisdom of this is apparent, as a remembrance of the Waratah disaster will suffice to establish. The new regulations are to be commended from the point of safety, but the effect upon the traffic and upon the public is yet to be seen.

The Legislative Council dealt finally last evening with the Married Women's Property Bill and then bestowed a considerable amount of attention upon the Payment of Members Bill, the further consideration of which is to take place on Wednesday next. The Temporary Supply Bill was read the first time. It is intended to proceed with this measure to-day.

Ministers met in Cabinet yesterday for the consideration of some important business, amongst which were some of the railway proposals of the Government.

The first business before the Legislative Assembly yesterday was a notification that the Clerk of the Assembly had been summoned to attend and give evidence in a case of alleged personation in connection with the recent election for Central Cumberland. Leave was given to the Clerk to attend. The questions with notice were only eight in number. One of these referred to the Deniliquin Fire Brigades Board, payment which, Mr. M'Millan said, would be provided for in the Fire Brigades Act Amendment Bill. Mr. Bruce Smith, in reply to Mr. Clubb, said the Railway Commissioners had reported with reference to the construction of a railway to Longnose Point, Balmain, but the report had not been considered, inasmuch as the lately acquired purchase at Darling Island promised to afford all the accommodation required at present. Mr. Brunker, in reply to Mr. Crick, said the rates levied under the Stock Protection Act in the Bathurst sheep district for 1888 were as high as heretofore, and the rates of bonuses were not less than those for 1887. Mr. M'Millan, in reply to Mr. Dowel, said the Railway Commissioners had issued a regulation allowing a rebate on season tickets, up to three in number, to firms doing a large business with the railway, the reduction being regulated by the amount of business done, as per bylaw 2. Eight such traders' tickets had been issued.

In consequence of the absence of Mr. Melville from the Legislative Assembly yesterday, Mr. Jacob Garrard was appointed Chairman of Committees for that day only. Mr. M'Millan, in reply to Mr. Ewing, who put a question without notice in reference to the wharfs on the Northern rivers, said he found that a large number of these wharfs were yielding no revenue, and in the public interests steps were being taken to lease them. He was willing to wait for an expression of opinion from the people interested before taking decided action. A petition was presented from Mr. James Collins against the Oakey Park Coal Mining Company's Bill; also a petition from inhabitants of Illawarra, praying for the establishment of a Harbour Trust at Wollongong. Mr. Bruce Smith, in reply to a question without notice from Mr. Allen, said he had already considered the question of erecting suitable premises for the Water and Sewerage Board, but had not been able to procure a convenient site at a reasonable price. Mr. Lyne, referring to a decision of the Minister for Lands, at the Appeal Court on Monday, wished to know whether the decision would affect cases previously dealt with. Mr. Brunker promised to give a reply if the hon. member asked the question after having given notice. The Married Women's Property Bill was received from the Legislative Council. On the motion of Sir Henry Parkes, it was agreed that the House should not meet to-morrow until 7 o'clock, in order to enable hon. members to attend the funeral of Mr. Sutherland. Mr. Farnell, having obtained leave, brought in a bill to enable the municipalities of Ryde and Hunter's Hill to interchange some land. The third reading of the Temporary Supply Bill was agreed to.

The Legislative Assembly went into committee for the further consideration of the Land Bill soon after 5 o'clock yesterday. Clause 28, providing for rents of leases to be subject to re-appraisement, and dealing with the extension of term of lease in the Western Division, was before the committee. Mr. Copeland spoke at some length, arguing that the lessees in the Eastern Division should have an extension of their leases as well as the lessees in the other divisions, and that the reserves should be thrown open. He intended to move an amendment, the effect of which would be to give the Eastern lessees a right to an extension of five years. If the reserves were thrown open to settlement there would be enough agricultural land for settlement for five years to come. The clause would set the pastoralists and the selectors at each others throats. He hoped they would reject the clause. Mr. Garrett spoke of the impolicy of bringing in so comprehensive a bill, when one of two clauses would have met all immediate requirements. The time must soon come when squatting must cease in the Eastern Division, but Mr. Copeland's amendment would lock up those lands. He was in favour of the clause remaining as it was. But although notice had been given to the lessees, the Government could withdraw the notices if they saw fit. Mr. J. P. Abbott thought the notices of termination of lease in the Eastern Division should not have been given in so wholesale a manner, as there were many runs on which it was not likely settlement would take place for a long while to come. If the whole of the Eastern Division were under occupation licenses the squatters would fight the selectors for the land as they did under the Act of 1861. It would be better to throw open the reserves, more than half of which could well be dispensed with.

Mr. Reid contended that Mr. Garrett's arguments were incorrect, and that the whole of the Eastern Division should not be thrown open. If those lands were thrown open, it should be upon some system, and not in a haphazard fashion. Some land would, no doubt, be required for settlement in the Eastern Division before long, but he thought Mr. Copeland's amendment would meet the case, and he hoped the Minister would accept it. Mr. Wall did not think it desirable that the whole of the Eastern Division should be thrown open to selection. Mr. Lee hoped that, even if the amendment of Mr. Copeland were carried, the bill would not be withdrawn. Mr. O'Sullivan supported the clause as it stood. Mr. Brunker said he would never legislate for any particular section; his desire was to do the best he could for the great masses of the people. This clause would be acceptable to the colony generally. He had received numerous inquiries from South Australia and Victoria for land in this colony, and he was not able to inform these people where they could settle. The rents received from pastoral lessees in the Eastern Division were but nominal. Only £50,000 was received for pastoral leases, and £21,500 for occupation licenses, making £71,500 in all; and of that amount £25,951 remained unpaid. In all there were 6,972,541 acres under pastoral lease and 4,474,809 acres under occupation license. The reserves available in the Grafton district suitable for agriculture comprised 15,000 acres; for pastoral purposes, 39,000 acres; for grazing lands, in addition to present holdings, 6000 acres. If those 60,000 acres were thrown open they would all be taken up in six months. He hoped the clause would be agreed to that evening. Mr. Inglis supported the amendment suggested by Mr. Copeland.

Some verbal amendments were made in clause 28, on the motion of Mr. Brunker, after which Mr. Hassall moved an amendment, the effect of which would be to make the term of the leases in the Central Division 15 years. After some discussion the amendment was negatived on a vote of 60 to 16. Mr. A'Beckett then moved another amendment to extend the leases in the Central Division for 10 years beyond the present term. After a long debate the amendment was withdrawn. Mr. J. P. Abbott moved another amendment to give the lessees in the Western Division power to demand a re-appraisement every five years. Mr. Alison wished to amend the amendment so as to make it apply to the Central as well as the Western Division. This was negatived by 28 to 26. Mr. Copeland then moved the amendment to allow extensions of the Eastern Division leases. Mr. Copeland's amendment was negatived by 30 to 16, and the clause as amended was agreed to.

Mr. M'Farlane has given notice of his intention to move in the Legislative Assembly to-morrow, that in order to promote an improved system of agriculture, and for the scientific instruction of those engaged in the cultivation of the soil, it is expedient that an agricultural college should be established without delay. That in connection with the proposed college, model and experimental farms should be established in various parts of the colony, to be presided over by competent persons, capable of imparting necessary instruction for the cultivation of the various products that can be profitably grown in the colony.

At yesterday's meeting of the Parliamentary Standing Committee on Public Works, the members passed a vote of condolence with Mrs. Sutherland, on account of the recent death of the late Hon. John Sutherland, and further decided to attend his funeral, which takes place this afternoon, in their official capacity. The remainder of the sitting was devoted to hearing evidence on the proposed improvements to the entrance of the Richmond River.

Sir Henry Parkes, although he has contemplated making a visit to Bourke for the last six years, has never yet been in that direction further than Dubbo. He has now, however, determined to visit the district and spend a few days there, and will depart by the mail train at 8 o'clock this evening, accompanied by Messrs. W. N. Willis and W. W. Davis, members for the district, Mr. T. Waddell, the other member, being unable to go. The Premier will arrive at Bourke at 4.50 p.m. to-morrow, and will be entertained at tea by some private gentlemen. On Saturday he will address a public meeting at Bourke. On Monday evening a banquet will be given in his honour, and on Tuesday he will set out on his return, arriving in Sydney on Wednesday.

The name of Mr. Daniel O'Connor, Postmaster-General, should have appeared in our report yesterday as one of those who were present at the laying of the foundation stone of the Royal Naval House, Charlotte-place.

The Premier will be interviewed at 10.30 this morning by a deputation from the trustees of the National Art Gallery, in reference to the completion of the building. The Minister of Works will receive deputations as follows:—At 10.30 a.m., concerning the water supply at Richmond; at 11 a.m., re the Coolamon to Whitton railway; at 11.30 a.m., with reference to the payment of money voted for the main roads of the municipality of Waratah; and at 12 noon, with regard to the Macquarie Pass-road.

Messrs. Frank Farnell and David Dale, Ms.L.A., and Mr. Stimson, of Fairfield, waited upon the Premier yesterday with reference to the site of the proposed new metropolitan fruit-market. Sir Henry Parkes promised to pay a visit of inspection to the two sites which had been brought under his notice, namely, Messrs. Inglis's saleyards, situated close to the Redfern railway terminus, and Messrs. Hudson Brothers premises, in Regent-street. After he had seen both sites he would lose no time in coming to a decision as to which should be adopted.

Our London correspondent states that the Government are at present pressingly engaged in the matter of the Lord-Lieutenancy of Ireland. There is a strong demand by all sections of the Unionists that the post should be extinguished and that a "royal court" should be kept up in the country. The annual general meeting of the Imperial Federation League calls for lengthy comment. Special allusion was made at it to the death of the Hon. W. B. Dalley. Several interesting Anglo-Australian items are also mentioned.

The tram extension from Leichhardt to Five Dock, so Mr. Hawthorne, M.L.A. has been informed, will shortly be proceeded with. The department is merely awaiting the completion of a few transfers of land through which the proposed line will pass at the Five Dock portion of the road, and which has been given free of all cost to the Government. So soon as this preliminary is concluded the work will be proceeded with. All the surveys have been made and specifications drawn out; the Commissioners have reported in favour of the route, and the Cabinet has given its approval to the scheme. It was promised by the Minister that if the land over which the line would pass was given free to the Government they would construct it; and in view of the promise it is not anticipated that any other suggestion will be entertained.

A petition is being signed for presentation to the Minister for Public Works by the residents of Tocumwal, Berrigan, and Murray Hut. They desire to be connected by rail with the metropolis via Jerilderie, and urge that this can be accomplished with equal benefit to the State and to themselves. It appears that a Crown reserve for travelling stock, a mile wide, extends over the whole of the proposed route, therefore no land would have to be purchased by the Government to construct the line. The country proposed to be traversed is level throughout, and no bridge or costly engineering would be required. It is estimated that the sale of the land along the proposed line would more than realise sufficient for its construction. The richness of the soil renders the roads unfit for traffic, except in dry weather; therefore, if a railway is not constructed between Jerilderie and Tocumwal, it will be necessary to form a metal road, which would be unproductive of revenue and more costly than a light railroad.

The following candidates were successful in the examination of those who attended the course of University extension lectures, delivered at Maitland by Mr. W. Crompton, M.A., upon "The Stuart Period":—Lily Free and R. Irwin (equal), Agnes Scobie, Agnes Roy Vernon, Carry Morgan, Rose Morgan, Eva Jones, May Edmunds. In the examination at Newcastle upon "English Poetry in the time of Wordsworth," Edward Byrne was successful.

The late Hon. John Sutherland, before he became unconscious, on Thursday last, requested his daughter, Mrs. Chapman, to present to his old and trusted friend, Mr. James Pickering, a costly-bound jubilee volume of "Arts and Sciences of Great Britain," together with a large cabinet photo of himself, as a mark of esteem in which he held him after a personal friendship of more than 30 years' duration. On the same day, and in the same manner, Mrs. Chapman also presented Mr. G. C. Taylor, J.P., on behalf and by instructions of her father, two volumes of "History of New South Wales," bearing a suitable inscription. Both these gentlemen have been his trusted hon. secretaries at his elections for years past, and he wished them to have something to remember him by.

The remains of the late Mr. John Sutherland, M.L.A., will be consigned to their final resting-place at the Necropolis to-day. The funeral cortege, headed by the Railway Working Men's Band, playing the "Dead March in Saul," will leave the deceased gentleman's late residence, Abercrombie-street, at 2 p.m., for the mortuary at the Redfern Railway Station, where a special train will be in readiness to convey the coffin, the relatives, and the public to Rookwood. The train is timed to leave at 2.50 p.m. It will be preceded by a special train carrying as many of the employees in the Railway Department as can make it convenient to attend the funeral. It is estimated that nearly 1000 railway men will be present to pay their respects to the memory of one who was for a very long period, regarded as the true friend of those engaged in connection with the New South Wales railway system. On arriving at the Necropolis, the coffin will be borne to the grave upon the shoulders of some eight or 10 of the railway men. The chaplain of the Glebe Masonic Lodge (Brother Pincock), of which the late Mr. Sutherland was the first Worshipful Master, will read the Masonic burial service at the grave, and the ordinary burial service will be conducted by the Rev. George Campbell, of Cleveland-street Congregational Church, of which church Mr. Sutherland was formerly a member. The Mayor and aldermen of Sydney and Redfern will attend the funeral. We are asked to announce that members of Masonic Lodges will appear in regalia. A public meeting will be held at the Redfern Town Hall to-night for the purpose of initiating a movement having for its object the establishment of a suitable memorial to the memory of the deceased gentleman. The Railway Commissioners have given instructions for special arrangements to be made in connection with the funeral. Provision has been made for Ministers and members of Parliament, and for personal friends who may wish to attend the interment. The Commissioners have also given authority for 12 of the leading representative men from the railway workshops to have a half holiday to attend the funeral. Mr. Sutherland was political head of the Railway Department at the time of the appointment of the Commissioners, and it is the wish of the Commissioners to pay the greatest respect possible to his memory.

One or two matters of interest were heard in Chambers yesterday by Mr. Justice Foster. In the case Mont de Piete Company versus Clare, the plaintiffs moved for a rule nisi to set aside the verdict given in defendant's favour in the District Court action, in which the plaintiffs had sought to recover from defendant certain furniture belonging to a third party named Chudleigh, and which they claimed under a bill of sale. The rule was granted, returnable next term. In Patter v. Bowling, the appellant Bowling applied under a special case stated by the licensing magistrates at the Redfern Police Court for an order setting aside their decision refusing his application for the renewal of his license of the Salutation Hotel, Botany-road, on the objection lodged by the police, that he was "a person of bad repute." Mr. Salomons, who appeared for the appellant, contended that there was no evidence to bear out the objection relied upon by the police; and that the fact that appellant was cohabiting with another man's wife, as alleged, did not render him a person of bad repute, under the law as laid down in England, and by a recent decision in Victoria. The point is a novel and somewhat interesting one, and his Honor, after hearing argument, reserved his decision until this morning.

There is now on view at the rooms of Walter Bradley and Co., 348, George-street, a collection of oil and watercolour paintings, sent out by the Society of British Painters, of more than usual merit. The collection comprises works by D. Roberts, R.A., C. Cattermole, R.I., David Cox, A. Sinclair, B. B. Wadham, M.W.C.S., H. J. Johnstone, R.I., E. Wake Cooke, and Otto Wolfe, P.I., Mr. B. B. Wadham has the largest share of the exhibition. This veteran artist, now in his 75th year, is still at work, and some of his latest productions bear favourable comparison with the works that won him renown in his early days. One of the best of his productions in the present collection is entitled "Love and War, or Jealousy and Revenge." The greater part of the collection consists of landscapes, the subjects of which are mostly taken from that school of British artists—North Wales. Other pieces of Mr. Wadham in this direction challenge attention, notably "Sunset on the Marshes," "On the Dee," and "View at Arthog," in oils, and "The Flooded Shwn-Mold," in watercolours. Another figure picture by the same artist, called "The Old Woman's Comfort," represents an old lady making toast before the fire; and his "Oyster Girl," which was exhibited at the Crystal Palace, at Sydenham, is a careful and pleasing composition. "Meditation," by Otto Wolfe, is a picture that attracted much attention at the Paris Exhibition. "Sunset in the Woods," by Mr. B. B. Wadham, at first sight looks like a representation of an Australian bush fire, but on examination it will be found to show the effects produced by an English summer sunset. Some of the water-colour drawings exhibit much merit, notably C. Cattermole's "On the Battlements," and David Cox has a choice bit entitled "Cottage on the Glyn." Another piece of work is A. Sinclair's "Ancient Welsh Cottage," while for neatness of execution and judicious colouring Mr. E. Wake Cooke's "By-way Home," will be appreciated by connoisseurs. The collection, which is well worth inspection, is to be offered by auction to-morrow at 2.30.

Messrs. Webb and Sons, of 448, George-street, having extended their show-rooms, opened yesterday a very interesting exhibition of articles in glass and ceramic ware. Among these will be found some choice specimens of what is known as "cameo glass." This ware consists of vases, jugs, or other articles, fashioned in coloured glass, which is afterwards covered with a coating of glass of a milk-white tint. Greater portion of this white covering is then ground or scraped away, leaving a design in white on a dark background, very much as is seen in cameo carvings. Some of the articles in this ware are very beautiful, representing scenes from classical and mythological history. Another very handsome class of goods will be found in what is called Burmese glass. This consists of a semi-opaque material, the basis of which is usually of a yellow tint, shading off to delicate reds and pinks. Vases, jugs, and basins are made in this material, and it is in especial use for "fairy lamps," a candelabrum of which, with 86 lamps, is shown. Among other goods, are some exquisitely hand-painted dinner and dessert plates, one series of the latter representing the British singing birds. The old "willow pattern" in a delicate shade of blue is reproduced; and there are tea and dinner sets in endless variety of shape and pattern. Some fine specimens of Dresden china are shown, and a variety of quaint ornaments in Venetian glass, besides which there are sets of Siamese troughs, which consist of shallow receptacles in fanciful forms, for the reception of buds and flowers for the ornamentation of dinner tables. The exhibition is well worth a visit from lovers of ornamental art.

Mr. Maguire, of George-street North, has shown us some photographs which he took of the scene at the laying of the foundation-stone of the Royal Naval Home on Tuesday. The photographs are excellently produced, and will form an interesting memento of the event.

In the Equity Court yesterday his Honor Mr. Justice Owen delivered judgment in the case of the Australian Trust Management Assurance and Investment Company, Limited, v. Worth, finding in favour of the plaintiff company. The case of Cassidy v. Oakes, an application for dissolution of partnership, was also commenced, but was not concluded when the Court rose.

There was little of interest in the Jury Courts yesterday. The action Want v. Moss and wife is still unfinished, and so slowly is it dragging along that his Honor and the foreman of the jury felt called upon to refer to the waste of time. The case will probably conclude to-day. In the No. 2 Jury Court the only case finished was that of Geddes v. Law and another, in which the plaintiff sued to recover the sum of £252 8s. 4d., for a quantity of hides sold to the defendants. The jury, however, found that there was no partnership, and gave a verdict accordingly. In Marshall and another v. Duchatel the plaintiffs seek to recover the sum of £1275, being arrears of rent alleged to be due for an hotel at Silverton, which the defendant had leased for five years. The case stands as part heard.

An ingenious invention has recently been introduced into the colony by the Fluid Carbon Company, Limited, which, it is stated, will have the desirable effect of considerably reducing the gas bill of any householder who adopts it. The apparatus consists of a small reservoir, which is charged with fluid carbon, and through which the gas has to pass after leaving the meter. Some experiments which were made yesterday afternoon by Mr. C. Gifford Moore, at the offices of the company in Post Office-chambers, served to illustrate in a remarkable way the value of the carburetter, which is said to increase the illuminating power of the gas by about two-thirds. The gas was first burned in its usual state, and then the carburetter was applied, a marked difference in the illuminating power being noticeable.

Mr. Edward Stanley, F.R.C.V.S., Government veterinarian, left Sydney on Tuesday evening for the Clarence River district, to report on the disease which has broken out amongst the horses of the district and which has been called "horse mange." It is expected that the disease will be found to be prurigo, a contagious skin disease concerning which a pamphlet was published last year by Mr. Stanley. This disease is characterised by an eruption of small scattered itching nodules, loss of hair from the withers, back, loins, and croup, and later on the head, mane, and tail are also involved. Mr. Stanley points out that the disease is not caused by the horse mite—acari psoroptes—but is apparently due to the presence of a vegetoid parasite of a microscopic fungi order.

The travellers and collectors of Messrs. Beale and Company held a reunion on Tuesday evening for the purpose of presenting to Mr. H. C. Elliott, who is leaving for Melbourne, a handsome silver cigar-case. Mr. H. S. Appleton occupied the chair, and Mr. Willoughby Andrew, though having left the employ, was unanimously voted to the vice-chair, and in a neat speech made the presentation, which was suitably acknowledged by the recipient.

Supplements to the Government Gazette were published yesterday containing the bylaws made by the Sydney Municipal Council, under the Sydney Corporation Act of 1879 for regulating the street traffic and the eastern market; and the bylaws of the Ryde Municipality were also published.

The Glebe Presbyterian Church was crowded on Tuesday evening to hear the service of song "Wee Davie," illustrative of Norman M'Leod's famous story. The Rev. Andrew Gardiner, M.A., presided, and read the extracts from the story. Mr. Alf. R. Bowie and a large choir, all members of the minister's Bible class, rendered the various pieces in a pleasing and able manner. A collection was taken up on behalf of missions. At the close, on the motion of Mr. Andrew M'Credie, a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Bowie and his choir.

At the Water Police Court yesterday, before Mr. Benjamin Lee, D.S.M., a man named George Dignam, 34, no occupation, was charged with being concerned, with others, in shooting at Constable Henry A. Slater, with intent to murder him. It was said that the accused is very well known to the police, having frequently been in trouble. On the application of the police, the accused was formally remanded for seven days, no evidence being taken.

Owing to the recent occurrences in the Darlinghurst Police division, double patrols were last night placed upon the more lonely beats. The revolver which was found upon the premises of Judge Stephen after the shooting of Constable Slater on Tuesday morning has been partially traced, but no further arrests have been made. Early this morning the injured constable was continuing to improve.

A meeting of the friends of Mr. James Antrobus, late manager of the Commercial Bank, Haymarket, has been called by advertisement for Friday afternoon next, at the Burrangong Hotel, Haymarket.

THE GORDON MEMORIAL IN MELBOURNE.

CEREMONY OF UNVEILING THE STATUE.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our Correspondent.)

MELBOURNE, Wednesday.

The unveiling of the Gordon Memorial Statue of bronze at the apex of the Parliamentary-reserve, corner of Gisborne and Spring streets, was performed by the Acting Governor this afternoon in the presence of several thousand spectators. A guard of honour from the artillery lined the path inside the reserve. When the statue was unveiled the Gordon Cadet Band played the Dead March. Major-General Downes, of Adelaide, as a companion-in-arms of General Gordon, afterwards delivered an address, eloquently referring to the heroic deeds of his departed comrade. The proceedings terminated with the singing of the National Anthem by the members of Williamson, Garner, and Musgrove's Company. The statue is much admired.

THE DEPARTURE OF THE MAILS.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our Correspondents.)

MELBOURNE, Wednesday.

The Postmaster-General received a telegram to-day from the Postmaster-General of New South Wales, agreeing to the proposal to which the Queensland Government had previously assented, that the Agents-General of the colonies be instructed to wait on Mr. Raikes, and urge that Thursday be selected for the departure of the mails from Adelaide instead of Wednesday. If this request be not complied with, they are to ask for Wednesday for the departure of the P. and O. boats, and Thursday for the Orient steamers. Failing that, to accept Wednesday for the departure of all mails. Mr. Derham has received a memorial from the public questions committee of the Presbyterian Assembly, opposing the departure on Mondays, as it caused Sunday labour, and might eventually lead to the running of trains on Sundays from Melbourne to Adelaide.

ADELAIDE, Wednesday.

Mr. Johnson, Minister of Education, has telegraphed to Sir Arthur Blyth as follows in reference to the mail arrangements:—"Wednesday is unsuitable; withdraw your consent, and insist upon Thursday; Wednesday inconvenient for Queensland and India."

Sir F. Napier Broome, Governor of Western Australia, writes a long letter in the Times upon the question of responsible government for Western Australia. VIOLENT SCENE IN THE CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES.

A FIGHT IN THE CHAMBER.

ONE DEPUTY DRAWS HIS REVOLVER.

[By Cable.]
(From our Correspondent.)

LONDON, June 26.

An extraordinary scene of violence took place in the French Chamber of Deputies last night.

M. Lajeune, a member of the Reactionary party, shouted in the Chamber that the Republican deputies were canaille. Five Republicans immediately left their seats and attacked M. Lajeune with their fists, and also tore his hair. Other deputies came to M. Lajeune's assistance, and defended him from the attacks of his assailants. The ushers eventually stopped the fight.

During the disturbance M. Andrieux, a Boulangist deputy, in a moment of excitement drew a revolver, but did not use it.

M. Lajeune has been temporarily excluded from the Chamber.

MELBOURNE HARBOUR TRUST LOAN.

[By Cable.]
(From our Correspondent.)

LONDON, June 25.

A loan of £500,000 is announced on behalf of the Melbourne Harbour Trust. The loan will bear interest at 4 per cent. per annum, and tenders will be opened on Tuesday next. The minimum will probably be fixed at 103.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our Correspondent.)

MELBOURNE, Wednesday.

The Melbourne Harbour Trust loan of £500,000, for the floating of which arrangements were made in London, is intended merely to enable the Trust to meet heavy current engagements, and not for any particular work. To-day the Melbourne Harbour Trust decided to charter for a year, at £6000, a hopper dredge, from the Otago Harbour Trust.

ARMING THE POLICE.

Since the Government has decided not to arm the police to protect the citizens, the public have determined to arm themselves, and Lassetter's Armoury has been besieged. They have a good assortment of modern revolvers. The new gun catalogue is ready, and may be had on application, so also may the Roller Skate Catalogue. Lassetters have sold thousands of skates; they are much liked, and orders still come pouring in both by letters and telegrams.—[Advt.].

THE "TIMES"-PARNELL COMMISSION.

LARGE SUMS SENT FROM AUSTRALIA.

[By Cable.]
(From our Correspondent.)

LONDON, June 25.

The sittings of the Times-Parnell Commission have been resumed. Doctor Kenny, whilst under examination, admitted that large sums had been sent to James Walsh, the league organiser, from Australia.

The witness also admitted that the National League had received £248,000. He stated he was unaware that the League books produced to the Commission showed that an amount of £117,000 was still unaccounted for in the expenditure of the League.

ENGLAND AND EGYPT.

FRANCE DEMANDS A GUARANTEE OF EVACUATION.

[By Cable.]
(From our Correspondent.)

LONDON, June 25.

France declines to sign an agreement for the conversion of the Egyptian national debt unless England guarantees to evacuate Egypt.

Baron Richtofen, German member of the Caisse de la Dette Publique, and Mr. Hewitt Mozley, secretary to the British Financial Adviser to the Egyptian Government, compose the special mission despatched from Egypt to Europe to take advantage of the cheapness of money and endeavour to arrange for a conversion of the national debt at a reduction of interest.

THE EUROPEAN SITUATION.

VIEWS OF COUNT KALNOKY.

THE ALLIED POWERS FIRMLY RESOLVED TO PREVENT WAR.

[By Cable.]
(From our Correspondent.)

LONDON, June 26.

Count Kalnoky, the Austro-Hungarian Minister for Foreign Affairs, declares that the peace of Europe is not endangered, although the situation is unsettled, and may be easily changed. Austria is friendly with all the States, including Russia. The allied Powers, Austria, Germany and Italy, he added, were firmly resolved to prevent war.

THE SUNKEN VESSEL CAPE VERDE.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our Correspondent.)

MELBOURNE, Wednesday.

Captain Robinson, the shipwright surveyor of the Merchant Shipping and Underwriters' Association, to-day visited the sunken vessel Cape Verde, accompanied by Captain Mitchell, and Ericson, the diver. The lastnamed went down and found that the injury to the vessel was not so serious as was at first supposed. A report to that effect was submitted by Captain Robinson to the afternoon meeting, representing the various insurance offices interested. It was resolved that salvage operations be undertaken by the underwriters with the view of saving the cargo, and, if possible, raising the vessel. Arrangements have already been made for obtaining the necessary plant and workmen, and operations will be commenced to-morrow morning. Only a few packages of trifling value have been washed out. The spars and rigging will be taken down first. The work of saving the cargo is likely to prove tedious, especially should the weather prove unfavourable, as is usual in the winter months.

Ericson went on to the main deck, on which there is 15ft. of water, and made his way to the port side, where the blow was struck by the Iolanthe. He found a rent in the side of the Cape Verde of great size, and altogether of a remarkable character. The hole is 10ft. wide at the top, and reaches down 8ft. from the deck. The tear is triangular shaped, but at what should be the point of the triangle there is a sudden round enlargement. The blow struck by the Iolanthe was somewhat glancing, and it would appear as if one of her anchors had been driven through the side of the Cape Verde, the stock being forced into the upper plates. Thus, when the colliding vessel fell off, the anchor tore portions of the upper plates of the Cape Verde clean out, the point of the anchor being driven into the lower plates. The deck is quite intact. Ericson considers the cargo could be obtained from the round hole in the lower portion of the injury. To fasten a temporary plate over such an immense gap will be a work of great difficulty, danger, and expense. The blow was struck just slightly forward of the mizzen mast.

EXTRAORDINARY RAILWAY ACCIDENT IN VICTORIA.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our Correspondent.)

MELBOURNE, Wednesday.

An extraordinary accident occurred at Craigieburn station, on the main line to Wodonga, on Tuesday, by which a slight delay was caused to the Sydney express. When near Donnybrook, the driver (Eustace) of the mixed train noticed that owing to the breaking of the coupling his engine had been separated from the train, and the train was following him at a high speed down a descending gradient. Instead of allowing the train gradually to overtake him, thereby stopping it, he went ahead, fearful lest damage would be caused to the engine and injury to himself. When he had travelled four and a-half miles to Craigieburn, he called a porter to put him on another road, but before this could be done the train overtook him and crashed into the engine. Two trucks were smashed. No other damage of a serious nature was done.

NEWS FROM THURSDAY ISLAND.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our Correspondent.)

THURSDAY ISLAND, Wednesday.

The steamer Vlissengen did not sail south, as wired last evening. Several disturbances occurred between the crew during the voyage, and at the different ports called at some officers or crew were imprisoned. Before reaching Batavia a cog-wheel of the machinery broke down. It was repaired at Batavia, but soon broke again. The vessel managed to get to this port with only one propeller, the other being disabled through the breaking of the cog-wheel. The Vlissengen will have to be towed southward to get her machinery repaired. It is considered impossible to take her through the Straits with only one propeller, which works poorly through being overstrained and the bearings worn down.

One of the seven lepers stationed on Dayman's Island died on Sunday.

VISIT OF LORD CARRINGTON TO THE MINE.

CONDOLENCE WITH THE BEREAVED FAMILIES.

A RELIEF FUND STARTED.

[By Telegraph.]
(From our Special Reporter.)

NEWCASTLE, Wednesday.

Up to the present no news is to hand of the 11 unhappy miners who are buried in the Glebe coal mine. Four shifts of men are doing everything in their power to make a road through to the heading where they hope to find some of their comrades, but they have so far been unsuccessful. They may, however, learn something definite any moment now. The monotony of the scene changed into one of great activity to-day consequent upon the visit of Lord Carrington, who arrived a few minutes after noon, and almost immediately drove out to the mine. His presence had been announced, and a great number of people gathered about the colliery. There were also present—Mr. Sydney Smith (Minister for Mines), Messrs. Melville, Creer, Fletcher, Walker, and Hurley, Ms.L.A. Lord Carrington, accompanied by some of these gentlemen, descended the pit, and was taken close up to the spot where the men are fighting their way through the fallen rock. The company was afforded a vivid idea of the hazardous nature of the work of the rescuers, and the too terrible consequences of the great fall of roof. The party remained below for upwards of an hour, and his Excellency took the opportunity of complimenting the mining manager, coal inspectors, and the men upon the humane and noble efforts put forward to search for the victims. At half-past 2 o'clock Lord Carrington was taken to the homes of the entombed men by the Mayors of Merewether and Newcastle, and in each instance his Excellency addressed some feeling words to the bereaved women and children. Mr. Melville, Mr. Hurley, Alderman Crane, and Mrs. Melville had just previously visited each place for the purpose of distributing £50, the gift of Mr. James Kidman, of Sydney, to the families. Mrs. Melville proportionately divided the sum of £45 between the wives and children, and gave Mrs. Archibald, the stepmother of the boy Banfield, the remaining £5.

A public meeting was held in the Merewether Council Chamber this evening to consider the best means of relieving the sufferers. Lord Carrington presided, there being on the platform Mr. S. Smith, Minister for Mines, Messrs. Melville, Hurley, Fletcher, and Creer, Ms.L.A. His Excellency, who was received with cheers, expressed the genuine sorrow felt by Lady Carrington and himself, and apologised for her absence through illness. He came to sympathise with them in their great trouble, and although the accident was not as bad as it might have been, it was a lamentable thing, and the first serious accident that had happened during 40 years in the great mining centre of the colony. When they heard of the dreadful fates that befell old Jabez Roberts, known to everyone in the district, and young Pete, there was but one thrilled feeling of sorrow and sympathy throughout the community. From what he saw in the mine that day, he was satisfied that every possible effort was being made to rescue the unhappy men, and that all hope had not yet been abandoned. He was struck in his visit to the homes of the wives and families by one noble feature, and it was that in the depths of their great grief and sorrow there was not one word of complaint from them. Their hearts were palpably broken, but they exhibited great resignation, courage, and fortitude in their awfully painful surroundings. He eulogised the efforts of all the officials in connection with the rescuing work, and considered that if there ever were heroes, the rescuers, fighting their way through fallen rock, amidst imminent risk and danger, ranked pre-eminently among them. (Cheers.) He hoped, by the blessing of God Almighty, that no such catastrophe would ever again happen. (Cheers.)

The Mayor of Wickham (Alderman Bennett), in moving the first resolution, urged that while a pick was at hand, no efforts should be spared to bring the unfortunate miners out of the tomb, dead or alive. The resolution was as follows:—"That this meeting deplores the late melancholy accident at the A. A. Company's Colliery, and pledges itself to do all in its power to relieve those who have become sufferers thereby."

This was seconded by the Rev. John Penman, supported in able and touching speeches by Messrs. S. Smith, Creer, Fletcher, Melville, Walker, and Hurley, and carried by acclamation.

The second resolution was moved by Alderman Edden, and seconded by the Rev. Seth Jones, as follows:—"That, in order to give effect to the former resolution, a committee be formed, consisting of the mayors of the various municipalities and others, for the purpose of taking up subscriptions in aid of the sufferers."

It was also carried unanimously.

The committee was subsequently formed.

In replying to a demonstrative vote of thanks, Lord Carrington remarked that as long as he was the Governor o the colony—which as far as he was concerned would be to the end of his term of five years of office—(cheers)—he would never do anything to lose their esteem or forfeit their good opinion.

A subscription list was opened, and a sum of £120 was collected in the room, Lord and Lady Carrington giving £20; Mr. Sydney Smith, £20; Mr. and Mrs. Melville, £15.

Cheers for Lord and Lady Carrington, the members of Parliament, and the rescuing party terminated the meeting.

THURSDAY, 1.15 A.M.

The night shift came up at 12.30. There is nothing fresh to report, except that the stone was getting easier to work, and that another 12 hours would tell a different tale. They have passed what is known as Hobson's, and are well on to Murphy's heading, 9 yards having been accomplished to-day. One of the rescuing party, who was more communicative than his confreres, denied the rumour that any decomposed smell had yet been detected, and argued that such a thing was impossible unless they were passing very close to the body of a man or a horse, because a very strong current of air is being sent into the drive with them, and no air at all is coming against them. A tremendous report was heard exactly at 12 o'clock. The miners say that this was caused by the bursting of rock, consequent upon the great pressure from above, and is not any indication of further falls of the roof. They have given up all hope of seeing their comrades alive, and some of the arguments put forth seem very feasible. One is that if any of the men were living they would have the sense to tap the rails or the air-pipes, and thus communicate the fact of their living state. In this way the message can be sent over a considerable distance, and the miners are thoroughly used to this method of intimating their presence.

VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, WEDNESDAY.

In the Legislative Assembly to-day a motion to grant the prayer of a petition from the public servants under the old Public Service Act, asking to be heard by counsel at the Bar on the ground that their alleged rights were not recognised under the new bill, was negatived by 52 to 32. The debate on the Public Service Amendment Bill was continued, a general concurrence with the Government proposals being expressed, though slight amendments were suggested. When the hour for private members' business arrived the debate was adjourned. The desirability of appointing a Royal Commission to inquire into the question of national fisheries was raised by Mr. L. L. Smith, who referred to the wanton destruction and the great cost of fish, and to the necessity of remedying the bad state of affairs. He pointed out that the New South Wales fisheries were regulated by a commission, which was self-remunerative. The Government of that colony were thus relieved from all expense and control, while the fish supply was properly controlled. The Commissioner of Customs said the whole trouble arose over the market operations, which the Commission could not deal with. The Department was doing everything necessary to conserve the fish. A long discussion followed, in which the motion met with much sympathy. Mr. Graves referred to the oyster supply of the colony, and asserted that New South Wales fishermen visited the Gippsland coast, in the Croajingalong district, and took oysters from the bay there to Sydney. A motion was submitted by Mr. Kirton limiting free railway passes; but it lapsed for want of a seconder. Mr. Taylor submitted a motion to the effect that the appointment of Mr. W. M. K. Vale, a rabid teetotaller, as arbitrator under the Licensing Act relative to the Geelong local option poll, was undesirable. He condemned the appointment as outrageous, and pointed out that the matter was not one as between the teetotallers and publicans, but it was the administration of justice. If the publicans appointed a violent advocate to represent them in arbitration a deadlock must ensue. Mr. Gillies defended the appointment, and contended it did not follow that Mr. Vale would introduce his private opinions into his public functions. After further debate the motion to adjourn the debate was negatived, and the House became rather excited. The motion was negatived by 44 to 18. The House then adjourned.

QUEENSLAND.

BRISBANE, WEDNESDAY.

In the Legislative Council to-day the Companies' Act Amendment Bill was finally passed through committee. The Prisons Bill was partly considered in committee. The House adjourned till to-morrow.

In the Assembly, Mr. Nelson, in reply to Mr. Foxton, said the Government had made arrangements with the Government of New South Wales for an increase in the accommodation at the changing station at Wallangarra. Tenders would be called for the work in about a fortnight. Sir Samuel Griffith moved the adjournment of the House and raised a discussion on the Brisbane sanitary question, and the method of disposal of nightsoil, which, under the contract for which tenders were now called, would be carried out to sea beyond Cape Moreton, or, in case of rough weather, be deposited in some part of Moreton Bay. The Brisbane Water Supply Bill was introduced, and read a first time. The remainder of the sitting was occupied with the further discussion of the Mines Regulation Bill in committee. A large number of amendments were introduced. Not much progress was made.

THE SAFETY OF H.M.S. DART.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

AUCKLAND, WEDNESDAY.

It has transpired that the boat belonging to H.M.S. Dart which was found in Tom Bowling's Bay, near North Cape, was picked up on the 14th instant. The news of the discovery was delayed. Quantities of vegetables have been found scattered along the western coast of the bay.

The s.s. Tarawera arrived to-day, from Sydney. Nothing was seen of H.M.S. Dart during the passage.

The public interest in the cable news of yesterday respecting the finding of a boat on the New Zealand coast belonging to H.M.S. Dart is evinced in a marked degree generally throughout the city. The enquiry as to whether the Dart has or has not gone down with the whole of her crew of 56 men became the question of the hour, and eager crowds might be seen yesterday watching the notice-boards at the General Post Office and equally so at the Merchants' Exchange. In every shop, office, or place of business in the city, speaking generally, the whereabouts of the little vessel formed probably a topic of discussion at some time or other during the day. The long passage of 20 days is dwelt upon. In shipping circles the opinion is largely held that the vessel will arrive here safe and well. A statement was abroad that the Admiral was likely to despatch H.M.S. Lizard upon a searching cruise, but in reply to an inquiry made last night, Admiral Fairfax said that so far no such decision had been arrived at. It is pointed out also with respect to the discoveries made that lifebelts, and not lifebuoys, were found, and this is material. Were they the ship's lifebuoys the worst would, undoubtedly, be feared, but the belts are accounted for by the presence of the boats out of which they are believed to have fallen or been washed. Admiral Fairfax up to late last night was in receipt of no further news respecting the vessel. The above cablegram fixes the date of the discovery of the boat on the eighth day after the Dart left Auckland. It is considered that she would be off the North Cape on the second day from Auckland, or the third at latest. That assumption would imply that the Dart was some distance on the Sydney side of New Zealand when the accident took place.

It should not be forgotten when considering the non-arrival of the Dart that with the aid of her steaming power she could make very little headway against the late weather, and in the event of the machinery becoming disabled westerly gales and tremendous head seas would completely prevent any headway being made in this direction under canvas alone. The reports of all the steamers which have arrived at Sydney from New Zealand, whether from Auckland or from Wellington, since the date of the Dart's departure from Auckland have without exception chronicled an uninterrupted experience of exceptionally bad weather, with heavy head sea and gales from west to south-west.

SHOCKING MINING ACCIDENT AT RUSHWORTH.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, WEDNESDAY.

A shocking fatality occurred in the Crown Cross gold mine at Rushworth, about 11 o'clock last night. Andrew Fife, underground manager, was being lowered down the shaft, 270 feet deep, in a "boatswain's chair." James Hall, at the bottom of the shaft, heard Fife call "look out." Before he had time to look round his light was extinguished, and he heard a thud beside him. On striking a match he was horrified to find Fife's body. His neck was broken, and his legs, arms, and chest were fearfully smashed. Death was instantaneous. The deceased was 32 years of age, and leaves a widow and four young children, who are poorly provided for.

AMUSEMENTS.

SOUTHERN AMATEUR THEATRICAL SOCIETY.

The Southern Amateur Theatrical Society gave one of their performances at the School of Arts last evening to a full and appreciative house. A double programme was presented. The first item was a comedietta, entitled "The Quiet Family," in which the characters were sustained by Mrs. Hornidge, Misses Cooper, Galbraith, and Maud Galbraith, Messrs. Victor Cohen, Hornidge, E. Cooper, and Dr. A. Burne. An operetta, entitled "Kelvin's Choice," was well received, several of the songs being encored repeatedly. The parts were sustained by Mrs. Leonard, Miss E. Deane, and Messrs. A. Deane, S. Deane, G. N Russell, and W. Morgan. Mr. Harbert Rice acted as musical conductor.

I. O. G. T.

Under the auspices of the Excelsior Lodge, 570, a grand benefit concert was held in the Town-hall, Rockdale, on Monday evening. The chair was taken by Mr. G. H. Wigley, P.G.C.T., who explained that the concert was in aid of a widow who was in very adverse circumstances, owing to sickness and bereavement. The object was a charitable one, and was characteristic of their noble order, their emblems being faith, hope, and charity. He was pleased to see such a large gathering. The programme opened with an overture by Miss Edwards. Mr. H. Rodin sang "Alone on the raft" with good effect. Mr. Brown was loudly applauded for his two songs, "Half-mast high" and "Happy Moments." The two well-known songs, "Kathleen Mavourneen" and "I dreamt I dwelt in marble halls," were done full justice to by Miss Ada Brees. Mr. Sydney Cummins sang two comic songs, and received encores. Mr. Edwards's voice was heard to advantage in "The Little Hero," the audience showing their appreciation by demanding an encore. Mr. Edwards then sang "Our Jack's come home to-day," and later on "The Naval Brigade," both of which were equally well rendered. The next to appear was Miss Ada Charlesworth, her song being "Rock-a-by, Baby," which was encored. Mr. F. Beard followed with George R. Sims' famous recitation, "An Old Actor's Story," which was well received. Mr. J. H Fellew (the blind vocalist) sang "True till Death" and "The Sleeping Camp" in good style. Mr. Springett amused the audience with his comic song "How d'ye do, dear boy," an encore being demanded. Miss Edwards contributed two items to the programme. Mr. Harry Benson, the ventriloquist, appeared as the "Nondescript," and caused some amusement. Miss Annie Charlesworth presided at the piano. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to the chairman for presiding and to the performers for the valuable aid they had rendered, and a pleasant evening's enjoyment was brought to a close with the National Anthem.

At the Y. M. C. A. Hall last night extracts from the works of Macaulay, Tennyson, Hood, Scott, Shakespeare, and other well-known authors were read by the Rev. Jonathan Evans. Only about 30 ladies and gentlemen occupied the body of the hall, but the gallery was fairly well filled. Mr. Evans was received with cheers. The programme will be changed to-night.

On Tuesday evening a service of song was conducted in connection with the Baptist Church at Ashfield. The Rev. F. Hibberd presided, the attendance was large. The service of song rendered was entitled, "Christy's Old Organ." The chairman performed the duties of reader. A powerful choir rendered the choruses. Miss Hibberd acted in the position of organist.

The St. Andrew's Literary Institute gave a Shakespearian concert and dramatic rehearsal on Tuesday evening last, in the Kent-street schoolroom. The audience, an appreciative one, filled the hall. Mr. J. Stinson occupied the chair. Miss Fairman ably acted as accompanist throughout, and opened the proceedings with a pleasing solo. Mr. J. C. Lloyd's bass voice sounded its best in "Wrecked and saved;" he also kindly filled up an absentee's place with the old favourite, "Friends of other days." Mr. Williams and Mr. Longlin gave satisfaction in "I fear no foe" and "Queen of the earth." Miss Wilson was well received in "Many a mile away," and in the duet with Mr. Lloyd, "See, the land appears in sight." Perhaps the best vocal effort of the evening was "The last watch," which Miss Ada Brees sang with grand style and voice. Miss Sally M'Coy charmed all in reciting "The Bashful Bachelor," which was delivered clearly and cleverly; but the chief items of the evening were three scenes from Shakspeare, which were capitally performed. Special thanks were accorded to Mr. George Rignold and Messrs. Hensch and Sons, of Park-street, for properties lent for the occasion.

A very enjoyable time was spent last night in the Congregational Sunday School-room, when a tea meeting and public meeting were held in connection with the anniversary of the Sunday School. There was a fair audience. The chair was occupied by Mr. Dobbie, superintendent of the Sunday School, who explained the cause of Dr. Jefferis's absence. He stated that Mrs. Jefferis was very ill with diphtheria, and the doctor deemed it prudent to stay away from the meeting, and he had asked Mr. Dobbie to take his place. At the close of the meeting a motion expressing sympathy with Dr. Jefferis in his trial was passed unanimously. During the evening speeches were delivered on the work done in the Sunday School by Messrs. Walker, Robertson, Cranna (old superintendent of the school), the Rev. W. G. Taylor (of Parramatta), and Mr. Satchell. Songs were rendered during the evening, and assisted materially in making the entertainment enjoyable.

A concert by the lady pupils of Brighton College, Randwick, was given in the local town hall last Tuesday evening. The school was assisted by Mr. H. R. Maclean, Miss Smith, and Mrs. Donaldson, and, together with the pupils, made the concert a decided success. Mr. Maclean and Miss Smith were heard to advantage in Salter's "Chanson et Danse," as a duet for two pianos, and also the "Commemoration March" by that gentleman. Miss Smith also played Liszt's "Illustrations de Prophete" very pleasantly, while Mrs. Donaldson's "The Song that reached my Heart" had to have an encore. The pupils were for the most part but children, and, considering their ages, played very creditably.

LECTURE.

"IN AND AROUND SYDNEY."

This was the title of a lecture delivered by Mr. H. G. Picton at St. Stephen's Church last evening, before a fair audience. The lecture was illustrated by a number of powerful lantern views of places and buildings in Sydney, and 16 splendid views of the Jenolan Caves. The proceeds were in aid of St. Stephen's Temperance Association.

NEW SOUTH WALES EMPLOYERS' UNION.

A meeting of the executive council of the New South Wales Employers' Union was held yesterday afternoon at 5, O'Connell-street. The council was largely represented, and Mr. Henry Hudson, president, occupied the chair. Correspondence was dealt with from the various affiliated unions established in the other colonies, among which were letters from the Victorian Employers' Union, on the subject of "indenturing of apprentices," a matter at present being considered jointly by the union and the Trades Hall Council of Melbourne. Letters were read from the New South Wales Pastoralists' Association, intimating that the members propose holding a meeting in Sydney at an early date to discuss matters chiefly affecting the interests of the pastoralists, as also from the Sydney Chamber of Commerce, on matters affecting the interests of the mercantile community. A report was read in reference to the funds of the union, and after some discussion it was agreed to adjourn the consideration of the report till next meeting. A report was also read as to the formation of an indemnity assurance company among members of the union, and all the necessary papers were submitted by the secretary. A further report was requested from the finance committee, to be laid before the next council meeting.

The Burwood Borough Council met at the Council Chambers, Burwood, on the 24th instant. Present: The Mayor in the Chair, Aldermen Redman, Simpson, Lacey, Scholes, Archer, and Hardie. The Water Supply and Sewerage Board applied for a return showing revenue derived from the standpipes, to be sent in half-yearly. Mr. C. L. Tange wrote regarding the boundaries of his land, and expressed the desire to amend the present boundary. The Secretary of the Botanical Gardens intimated that a number of trees would be supplied for the planting of the park. Upon the recommendation of the finance committee, accounts amounting to £157 17s. 2d. were passed for payment. The Mayor, in reply to questions, said he would instruct the overseer to fill in a well which was alleged to be in a dangerous state; and would convene a meeting of the finance committee for the purpose of considering the present position of the council. Alderman Redman moved,—"That Rowley-street be ballasted, at a cost of £60." Carried. Upon a motion of Alderman Redman it was resolved to asphalt the footway in Rowley-street. The council resolved itself into committee for the purpose of considering applications for the position of inspector of nuisances, 124 of which were received. These were eventually reduced by ballot to seven, and a final decision postponed.

The lighting committee's report, recommending Kirkland and Co.'s tender for lighting the borough by electricity, was brought up for adoption. A letter was received from the Parramatta Gas Company, stating that they were willing to reconsider their offer on the basis of a 10 years' lease. The adoption of the lighting committee's report was moved by the Mayor, and seconded by Alderman Dixon. An amendment was moved by Alderman Taylor, and seconded by Alderman Ritchie, to the effect that the report be postponed till next year, and the council's solicitor be asked for an opinion as to whether the Electric Lighting Company could supply private houses with light. Alderman Brodie moved as a further amendment,—"That the report be made an order of the day for that day six months." This was seconded by Alderman Booth. Alderman Taylor's amendment was carried. It was resolved that a deputation, introduced by the member for the borough, wait upon the Minister for Works, with a view to asking the Government to make some arrangement with Mr. Stone (whose house was washed away by the late floods), with a view to putting an end to litigation on the matter. On the motion of Alderman Ritchie, it was resolved,—"That the Mayor cause to be laid upon the table all documents, correspondence, estimates, minutes, tenders, and all information in the possession of the council in reference to lighting the borough of Parramatta with electricity." In answer to a question by Alderman Ritchie, the Mayor said that 50 men were now employed in accordance with an arrangement with the Government.

"HURRY UP."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Nearly four months ago the Newtown freetraders held a mass meeting at St. George's Hall for the purpose of forming a local branch of the Metropolitan Freetrade and Liberal Association. After the combined eloquence of one Minister of the Crown and the three individual members for the electorate, plus considerable oratory on the part of the usual number of influential citizens, the meeting resulted in merely affirming the desirableness and necessity of forming the proposed branch association. Several weeks subsequent to the date of this almost abortive meeting, another mass meeting was convened, at which the eloquence was equally redundant, but the result something more practical. The branch association was formed, members enrolled, officers elected, and a secretary appointed; the latter gentleman being instructed to convene an early inaugural meeting, for the purpose of arranging the future business of the association. Some three months have since elapsed, however, and nothing further has eventuated. This apathy is quite consistent with the lethargy which so strangely characterises freetraders in general; but it is very disappointing to the earnest freetraders of the constituency, who were induced to enrol themselves as members from a laudable desire to co-operate with others in the promotion of the cause they espouse. While freetraders will persist in neglecting their own interests, they cannot expect to convert those of opposite opinions. Indifference is a false recommendation, and must rapidly give place to the enemy's display of enthusiasm, in respect of which the freetraders might, with profit to their cause, take a lesson from their opponents. Unless the freetraders of Newtown bestir themselves, they will soon find themselves like Æsop's hare, a long way behind the protectionist tortoise when the next race is run.

The Bulletin de l'Imprimerie contains the following query—"What was the highest price ever given for any book? We leave this question to be decided by competent authorities among book-lovers. We may, however, venture to say that we know of one for which a sum of 250,000 francs (£10,000) was paid by its present owner, the German Government. That book is a missal, formerly given by Pope Leo X. to King Henry VIII. of England, along with a parchment conferring on that Sovereign the right of assuming the title of 'Defender of the Faith,' borne ever since by English Kings. Charles II. made a present of the missal to the ancestor of the famous Duke of Hamilton, whose extensive and valuable library was sold some years ago by Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson and Hodge, of London. The book which secured the highest offer was a Hebrew Bible, in the possession of the Vatican. In 1512 the Jews of Venice proposed to Pope Julius II. to buy the Bible, and to pay for it its weight in gold. It was so heavy that it required two men to carry it. Indeed, it weighed 325lbs., thus representing the value of half a million of francs (£20,000). Though being much pressed for money, in order to keep up the 'Holy League' against King Louis XII. of France, Julius II. declined to part with the volume."

POLICE PROTECTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—With respect to the serious dangers to which the police of Sydney have recently become exposed during the performance of their night duties, it may be mentioned that in London, during a burglary epidemic, the police beats in the districts affected are shortened, so that every constable on duty is more or less within hearing of an alarm raised by another constable on any of the adjoining beats. In addition to this, extra constables are sent out at irregular intervals over the various beats, walking, not with the measured tread of the policeman on duty, but with the step of an ordinary pedestrian. The same method is adopted in Paris and other large European cities. As to arming the police with revolvers, their best protection on dark nights is a bull's-eye lantern. Sydney is one of the few cities in which the police are not provided with this. In London, Birmingham, Manchester, Glasgow, and elsewhere, it would be impossible for the police to discharge their night duties efficiently without some such assistance. It enables them to see that the fastenings of doors and gates are secure, detect evil-doers skulking in dark corners, indicate in cases of attack the point to which assistance should be brought, and above all, when a conflict is inevitable, the light suddenly flashed in the offender's face not only enables the constable to recognise his features, but also to act on the aggressive or defensive at an advantage, he being in shadow, while his assailant is exposed to the full glare of the light from the lantern. If the Inspector-General of Police could see his way to act in accordance with these suggestions, he would not regret so doing.

June 26. I am, &c., JOHN PLUMMER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Now that a second constable has been shot by burglars in close proximity to the city, would it not be advisable for our Legislature to introduce a bill wherein it could be enacted that some punishment more severe than imprisonment might be imposed on those gentlemen professing the art of using the "jemmy?" A "cracksman" knows fully as well as any other man that if he is detected his expenses for housekeeping, &c., so far as he is concerned, will be, for some time, nil; but that does not appear to deter them from their cowardice. I say cowardice, because I do not consider that any person with a man's courage would shirk honest labour and go prowling about at night, armed with a loaded revolver, or any other dangerous weapon, and break into a house where he thinks he can get anything like sufficient booty to keep him in idleness, after the time when people should be taking the rest they have earned by their day's labour, and require. I am not an inhuman man, but I cannot help thinking that the old Mosaic system of tooth for tooth, eye for eye, should in such cases be carried out; in other words, they should be flogged, and in my opinion such flogging should be given both on the going in and the coming out of the Government boarding-house; on the going in to teach them that they are to be punished for cruelty and cowardice, and on the coming out to remind them of what they have done.

I suggest this because we have seen how effectually flogging has put down the garroting business, and I feel convinced that it would tend very greatly to put down this business of burglary also. I know that the cry will generally be against it, because we are now living in the nineteenth century, and should be somewhat civilised, and that flogging is a degradation; but I say in answer that experience teaches us that like is the most effectual cure for like, and where is the degradation in punishing a man according to his deserts. If we are civilised why does not one of our legislators introduce a punishment equal to the civilised occasion? Such burglars as we now hear of are not civilised certainly. Why not teach them to be so by the best means known to us, and flog them till better means can be discovered? I am, &c., T. J. SYMMONDS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The inhabitants of London and its suburbs have been suffering from similar atrocities by burglars and housebreakers under arms as we here in Sydney, with a result that a bill has been brought before Parliament to empower judges to impose the penalty of flogging with imprisonment for any criminal found guilty of housebreaking under arms, one of the arguments in favour of this measure being that of the suppression of garroting by a like provision. I do not know the details of the bill, but I think it should embrace "being illegally on premises under arms," as well as burglary. A punishment of 100 lashes per annum for every year's imprisonment would soon stop these cowards.

I am, &c., DARLING POINT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—One would think the fresh outrage of shooting another constable in the performance of his dangerous duty would plainly exhibit the necessity of allowing those police who are on night patrol in the suburbs to be provided with suitable weapons, as well to strengthen their hands in arresting criminals as for their own self-protection. Is it not an erroneous principle to be more tender for the persons of vile robbers than solicitous for the lives of valuable public officers? A constable personifies the law, and therefore, when a real or reasonably suspected criminal is called upon to surrender to the law, he makes war upon and defies the law if he resists, and must take the consequences. Is it fair or reasonable to place a constable in such a disadvantageous position as to require him, unarmed, in a lonely place at night, to engage in mortal strife with two or more desperate ruffians? Any man who could not be safely trusted with deadly weapons is not qualified to be a constable. I feel convinced that if the citizens generally were polled on this question, not less than three-fourths of them would be in favour of arming the police on suburban night duty, and I for one earnestly hope that this just and necessary concession will forthwith be authorised. I am, &c.,

June 25. EDWARD SHARP.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—After reading your leading article, and all the various correspondence connected with the arming of the police, I would suggest that the suburban police should be provided with revolvers, as well as patrolling in couples, both for their own safety and that of the residents; but the mere fact of two policemen being together is not sufficient to strike terror into men who are desperate enough to use firearms in the event of their being interfered with, either by the police or householders. The town police there is no necessity to arm, nor do I advocate any such arming, as the sort of disturbers of the peace in the city are mostly drunkards and noisy individuals; but the burglar is a very different character, and would not scruple to use any weapon when detected in his nefarious work. Therefore, I think it is criminal on the part of the authorities to further risk any more valuable lives, when by taking the above precaution they can be saved from a cruel death, and a great loss to the community, to say nothing of the sad bereavement to their relatives. Hoping that immediate action may be taken in the matter.

I am, &c., PRECAUTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The letter which appears in your issue of to-day addressed to the Inspector-General of Police, by "Ecce," deserves the thanks of the whole community, and will, I hope, have the effect of stirring the department interested into some sort of action. I know that many of the cases quoted by your correspondent are perfectly true, and there are others, well known to residents of the eastern suburbs, which he has not mentioned. What astounds me is that in a small city like Sydney, gangs of armed ruffians should be allowed for months to ply their nefarious trade with apparently perfect impunity. A short time ago Burwood and the neighbourhood was infested with burglars of the same type as are now at work in the neighbourhood of Darling Point, and I should much like to see a list of these cases reported to the Police Department, in each of which the aggrieved householder was met with the injunction to keep the matter quiet, and the result has, I think I am safe in saying, been nil. It is no secret now that in the eastern suburbs a very large number of the inhabitants are armed and prepared to reckon with the cowardly ruffians, whose trade is murder and rapine, if they get a chance, simply because they see that the Police Department is unable to grapple with the difficulty.

A patrol has lately been established in the eastern suburbs, but for what purpose nobody seems to know. It would be quite as much use to march a company of the Permanent Force, with a band at its head, up and down the roads as these patrols, as their advance is heard a quarter of a mile away. Private individuals are armed for the protection of their property, and the night constabulary should also be armed for the protection of their lives—at least let the experiment be tried. The lives of these criminals are of no value. The sooner the country is rid of them the better, and if they cannot be got rid of under the present police regime, there is English precedent for certain action being taken by the head of the force when he finds himself unable to cope with difficulties which present themselves, which allows of someone more capable being put in his place. I am, &c.,

LADIES' HATS IN THEATRES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—As a solution of the "lady hat" trouble in the stalls, I would repeat the suggestion, viz., that theatrical managers exhibit a notice in the stalls requiring all ladies above the age of 20 to wear their hats during the performance. If some manager would act on this suggestion, I don't think we should be much troubled in future with the "lady hat" nuisance.

The "ocean tricycle" is the latest novelty from America. This extraordinary vehicle consists of an elevated platform supported upon iron framework, and connected by a ladder with a lower platform, under which are three driving wheels of large diameter. These wheels are driven by a steam engine placed, together with the riders—who may number about 20—upon the higher platform, well out of reach of spray. Thousands of people who now take boats or walk on piers would, it is supposed, enjoy a ride over two fathoms of sea water.

On May 17 Messrs. Birrell, Stenhouse, and Co. launched from their shipbuilding yard at Dumbarton a four-masted steel ship of 2180 tons register, for the Shire Line of Messrs. Thomas Law and Co. Glasgow. Her dimensions are—Length, 284ft.; breadth, 41ft.; depth, 24ft. 6in. She has been built to Lloyd's highest class, with all appliances of the most improved description. The new vessel was named Elginshire by Miss Hannah Law, and when completed will load for San Francisco, and will be under the command of Captain Alexander, late of the Stirlingshire.

Captain Miles, of Hobart, is negotiating for the purchase of the tug Tamar. The tug, according to latest advice, was high up on the bank near the depot grounds, and attempts had been made to haul her into deep water, but so far without success.

Floating dry docks are growing in favour. A large floating dry dock, similar to those at Barrow-in-Furness, Sebastopol, and Vladivostock, is being built by Messrs. Stanfield and Clark, at their works at Grays, near Tilbury. It is intended for Zarate, a port on the Parana River, some few miles above Buenos Ayres. It will be finished in the course of the year, and when re-erected at Zarate will be the most powerful floating dock on the American continent, and, it is expected, the most rapid in the world. It is intended for the accommodation of heavy vessels, such as ironclads of 5000 tons weight, and is designed so that it may be extended at any time to be able to dock ships of twice that weight.

Upon her famous passage across the Atlantic the City of Paris had 1152 passengers on board. She arrived at Queenstown at 2 a.m. on May 22. The exact length of her passage from Sandy Hook to Roche's Point was 6 days 20 minutes—the fastest on record.

The Jennie B. will land her cargo of coal at the Atlas Dock Company's wharf, and will probably then undergo an overhaul and repairs there.

The Turkestan, 1592 tons, Captain D. F. B. Scott, has entered out at Melbourne for Newcastle.

The Derbyshire, 1153 tons, Captain F. Williams, cleared at Melbourne for Newcastle June 24. Also the Falconhurst, 1998 tons, Captain A. Jagoe, and the Cleomene, 1738 tons, Captain R. T. Oxburgh.

LAUNCH OF MESSRS. DEVITT AND MOORE'S SHIP TAMAR FOR THE AUSTRALIAN TRADE.

Messrs. Napier, Shanks, and Bell, of Yoker, Glasgow, launched on May 20 the steel three-masted sailing ship Tamar, which has been built to the order of Messrs. Devitt and Moore, London, as an addition to their well-known Australian line of packets. The Tamar is 267ft. long, 42ft. beam 25½ft moulded depth, and will register 2000 tons, with a carrying capacity of about 3260 tons all told. She is built to Lloyd's highest class, under special survey, with steel decks, covered with pine; steel bowsprits, lower masts, and lower topmasts; and, having good lines, is expected to prove a fast sailer. A full poop gives accommodation for the master, officers, and a few passengers; and the equipment throughout is of the most complete and approved description, including steam and hand winches, windlass to be worked by steam and by hand, powerful capstans, and special screw steering gear. At the launch the owners were represented by Captain Brown, who will command the vessel on her maiden voyage to Sydney. The ceremony of naming her was performed by Miss Bell, 19, Eton-place, Hillhead, and amongst those present were Mr., Mrs., and Misses Henry Watson, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Napier and Miss Napier, Mrs. Napier, Mr. Smith, Rev. Mr. Chadwick, Mrs. Parker, Mr. F. Clements (of the China Merchant Steam Navigation Company), Mr. G. Tuckett, Mr. H. Fairgrieve, Mr. Wm. Richards, Mr. L. C. Owens, Captain Polson.

QUADRUPLE EXPANSION ENGINES — 200LBS. PRESSURE AT SEA.

An event of more than ordinary interest to marine engineers took place on May 18 in the trial trip of the steamship Meath, which has just been fitted with quadruple engines by the Scotia Indian Works Company. It is a matter of common recollection that in 1867 and 1868 shipowners very hesitatingly adopted the compound engines with a pressure of steam of from 65lb. to 70lb. In the short space of about five years the compound engine was practically the only type of engine made, and the pressure rose from 60lb. to 90lb. This was the state of things which continued until about 1880, when a pressure of 150lb. with triple-expansion engines began to be introduced. This type of engines in a very short space of time completely superseded the compound engine, but from then until now no great advance in pressure of steam used has been made, the highest reached having been 180lb. Special interest therefore attaches to the trial trip of the steamship Meath, of Sunderland, belonging to Messrs. R. M. Hudson and Sons, which vessel, having undergone extensive alterations, and having been lengthened 36 feet, has had her old engines quadrupled the pressure of steam employed being 200lb. The old boilers used with the compound type of engines were two in number, but in the higher pressure three boilers are employed, occupying no more space transversely than the original boilers. By the employment of 200lb. pressure it was observed on the trial that a great increase in power, and consequently in speed, was obtained, the engines indicating 1,350-h.p., whilst the mean speed of the steamer was 12·25 knots. The previous horse-power was 900, and by the alterations the steamer carries 500 tons more cargo, and has an increased speed of at least a knot and a half. The consumption of fuel was 1·21b. per h.p. It was also noticed that the generation of steam at the pressure indicated was comparatively easy, no trouble whatever being experienced in maintaining 198lb. in the gauge, whilst the engines worked "like a clock."

THE MAIL STEAMERS.

The Orient Company's R.M.S. Austral, due in port to-day from London, passed Gabo Island at 5.5 p.m. yesterday. She will bring up at the company's moorings in Neutral Bay.

The s.s. Salazie (M. M. Company's line), hence to Marseilles via ports, passed Gabo Island at 6.5 p.m. yesterday. She is due in Melbourne to-day.

THE BARQUE BELLEISLE IN DANGER.

A fearful sea was running at Newcastle yesterday, in common with several other ports on the coast, and soon after the barque Belleisle had got under weigh for Auckland a signal gun was fired from Fortification Hill, intimating that assistance was wanted. A crew in the lifeboat speedily put out to the rescue. It was seen that a tugboat had hold of the barque, and, against heavy odds of wind and sea, towed her off a lee shore.

THE ACCIDENT TO THE GLANWORTH.

The full report of the accident at Brisbane to the steamer Glanworth (A. U. S. N. Company) is now to hand. It appears that the steamer after passing the Bulimba ferry the darkness was so intense that Captain Fawcett could not distinguish the river banks, and before he was aware of it the Toombul wharf, which stands only two or three hundred yards from the mouth of Breakfast Creek, loomed up in front of the Glanworth's bows. The captain at once gave the order to the engineer to reverse the engines and go full speed astern. This order was promptly executed, but a minute later the Glanworth, with a crash which was heard all over the neighbourhood, ran stem on to the wharf, striking it obliquely on the Breakfast Creek side. The wharf, it may here be explained, extends 82ft. into the stream from the abutment, and the spot where the contact took place is a little over 30ft. from the frontage of the structure. It was very nearly low tide at the time, and there was not anything like sufficient water to float the ship. However, the bottom at this spot is very soft, and the impetus of the vessel carried her through the mud, evidently without checking her way to any appreciable extent, for her stem forced its way through the herbing and three large ironbark stringers, and she was only brought up when the fourth stringer was struck. The first stringer measured 12 x 12in., and the others 6 x 12in. About 20 of the 6 x 4 planks forming the decking of the wharf were either considerably splintered or sprung, and one was hurled a distance of 10ft. along the wharf. Bolts and strong iron fastenings were twisted and rent asunder as though they had been composed of the most flimsy material, and some of the bracings were also torn and splintered. The damage to the steamer was found to be confined to the starboard bow, where there is an opening between 7ft. and 8ft. in length, commencing at the stem, and about 18in. or 2ft. in width, terminating in a line with the main deck. Abaft of this are several indentations, the plates in some instances having been cracked right through. There are two firemen's berths in the part of the ship where the damage occurred, and one man was asleep there when the accident took place. He had a very narrow escape, but fortunately he was not injured in any way.

STRANGE CONDUCT OF A CAPTAIN.

It was stated the other day in a telegram that H.M.S. Raven had arrived at Cooktown, bringing particulars of the desertion of a schooner named the Freddy at New Guinea. By the Cooktown papers it seems that the schooner, in command of Captain D. Smythe, left Cairns on Saturday, 18th May, with 30 miners on board for the Sudest goldfield. A fair wind took them nearly due north, and there was every prospect of a good passage. Soon after leaving Cairns, however, it was evident that something would go wrong. Not only did the vessel commence leaking in a most ominous way, but the cargo was broached, in which was a quantity of grog, and then commenced a scene, the description of which is not yet to hand. A favourable breeze took the vessel to the New Guinea coast, and in Hoola Bay, 70 miles east of Port Moresby, they came to anchor. The vessel was then leaking fast, making 5½in. per hour, and the miners were afraid to go any further in her. The captain and four men then went ashore, taking with them the greater part of the cargo. The mate, one seaman, and a miner took the Freddy's dingy and rowed 60 miles to Port Moresby and there gave information to the authorities of the state of the vessel. H.M.S. Raven left at once, having on board Captain Thompson (of the Hygeia) and Mr. Lawes (of the B. N. G. Government). It was found that Captain Smythe and the four men had cleared up country, taking with them a certain portion of the stores, and the rest were placed on board the Freddy, which was taken into Port Moresby by Captain Thompson, and there beached. The miners would probably get away from Port Moresby in the Hope, which had come there with coals, and was just ready to sail for Samarai.

THE MARION'S VISIT TO ST. AIGNAN.

Telegraphic news from Cooktown lately included advice of the return of the Marion schooner from St. Aignan. She had as passengers Mr. James Cashman and the original prospectors of St. Aignan. Mr. Cashman, describing the island, said:—"The island itself is very rough, clothed with a dense vegetation, so much so that it takes half a day to clear a spot for a tent. In this it is totally unlike Sudest, where the ridges are almost absolutely free from trees. It is nearly always raining, and so damp is the atmosphere that even in fine weather you have to dry your clothes by a fire. The island is absolutely worked out and there are about 300 men on the field, most of them with no money, and some with no tucker, and dependent on the natives for food. Between 40 and 50 are down with fever, and one man, Edmund Carey, a Brisbane native, was buried the day before the Marion left. The bulk of the miners are waiting for news from Rossel Island, and if that is unfavourable Mr. Cashman thinks the miners will rush the boats for a return passage to Cooktown."

Our cabled quotations of bank shares show an advance of 5s. in Commercial of Australia, and a fall of 5s. in London Chartered and Bank of New Zealand; a fall of 20s. in Bank of South Australia, Mercantile Bank of Australia being slightly higher.

By the Cintra (s), which left to-day for Brisbane, the Queensland National Bank shipped sovereigns of the value of £25,000.

In the Import markets to-day there was very little business done. Still there are orders for the country, with which a good trade is looked for when the roads permit of the transport of goods. There was also some inquiry for goods for the other colonies. There is extremely little doing in either flour or wheat, and prices remain steady, with apparently little prospect of much change. Our cable news reports the English wheat market as 6d. per quarter higher, the American and Continental markets also advancing. A small catalogue of Macao tea was quitted at the City Mart to-day, comprising 100 half-chests at 11½d., and 800 quarter-chests at 1s. 2½d. Privately, tea is going off fairly well for the time of the year, owing, as has already been stated, to the unusual delay in the opening of the Foochow sales—a delay that suits holders in England, where the stocks are unusually heavy, as well as those in these colonies. Some fairly good parcels of dried fruits have been cleared off at prices on a par with those lately ruling, 4½d. being the quotation for prime currants, 4½d. to 4¾d. for elemes, and 4¾d. for sultanas. A quantity of Stephens' goods were sold under the hammer as follows:—Hexagon pickles, mixed, 4s. 7d.; quarter capers, 5s. 1d.; assorted jams, 5s. 9d.; marmalade, 4s. 11d.; quarter-casks vinegar, 9¼d. Business was done in sperm candles at from 5½d. to 5¾d. A considerable line of Goudas was placed. Messrs. Harris and Ackman advertise the sale to-morrow (Thursday) of 1000 boxes of paraffine candles. Locally there is not very much doing in sugar, except such as the company may be supplying. Speculative buyers in other colonies have re-sold portion of their purchases in Brisbane and Melbourne, where the market is fully as high as it is here. From Messrs. F. O. Licht's May circular received to-day we learn that in Germany the weather for beet-sowing was favourable, and previous reports of an increase of sowing to the extent of 10 per cent. are confirmed. In France it is said the weather favoured the beets, and the increase of sowing is set down by Mr. Licht at 10 per cent. In Belgium and Holland the weather was as the farmer desired it to be, and a 5 per cent. increase was asserted as probable. In Russia the estimates of the sowings ranged from an area equal to last year's up to a quantity 10 per cent. in excess of last year's returns. In figures, the situation of the 1889-90 crop, on the basis of the probable increase of sowings, is expressed by a total of 3,015,000 tons, against 2,735,000 tons, the estimated yield for 1888-89; the latter return, if realised, giving a surplus of 283,000 tons on the production for 1887-88, and a surplus of 5000 tons on the large yield of 1886-7. As stated yesterday on the authority of our cablegram, Mr. Licht does not this month alter the estimate given in May, as shown by these figures. As to the statistical position, we learn that for the 12 months ended in April 3,959,800 tons were consumed in Europe and North America, an increase of 247,500 tons, of which 161,000 tons was in Europe. At the beginning of September the stocks in Europe and North America amounted to 556,311 tons, against the 612,814 tons at the end of the previous sugar year. After eight months of the year these stocks were increased to 670,768 tons, an addition by excess of production and import of 114,000 tons; but in the previous year the increase in the stocks during the corresponding period was from 612,814 tons to 893,785 tons, an addition from like sources of 283,000 tons. With the addition of the floating cargoes, the visible stocks from the principal countries were stated to be as follows:—

The following is from Mr. C. Czarnikow's circular of May 17:—

"Sugar.—Although opinions in the home trade have been unsettled by the recent fluctuations in the Continental as well as in the English markets for beet, more confidence has been shown during the last few days; business continues, however, to be limited, both by the indecision of buyers and by the general firmness shown by holders. Under the influence of the recent decline, some importers of cane sugar have been prepared to meet the market, and the sales made show a further relapse of about 6d. to 1s. per cwt. This applies especially to the higher-priced qualities, there being a less important reduction in the value of the lower descriptions. The trade seems at present disposed to adhere to a hand-to-mouth policy, and comparatively little interest has been shown lately in distant operations, but the statistical position shows increasing strength, and the supplies for the summer months must be unusually light. Beetroot.—The movements in the Continental markets are difficult to follow or explain, but it becomes daily more apparent that owing to the reduction in the stocks, both in Europe and the States, the future of the next few months is, to a greater extent than usual, in the hands of speculators. There have been several fluctuations during the week, but the market closes about 4½d. dearer than on Friday last. The actual exports from Germany in April have been very heavy, being 38,000 tons raw and 19,800 tons refined. Total for the crop, 112,000 tons more than last year, which would seem to leave available for export even less than stated by Licht. As April imports from Germany and Austria into U. K. were 41,356 tons raw against 17,535, it is computed that most of the surplus has come here, and is not kept back so much as variously reported. The weather has been very favourable for the new crop, and it is to be hoped that much of the delay can be made good. The actual extent of sowings is still unknown; 10 per cent. on the average seems to be mostly talked of, but it would be well to bear in mind that a few per cent. more or less are of much less importance than favourable or unfavourable weather, and if the crop should begin some weeks earlier than last year it would make a vast difference in our autumn supplies at a moment when they may be much wanted. New crop quotations are unchanged at 15s. 4½d. October, 14s. 4½d. to 14s. 6d. November-December."

A parcel of malt was quitted at 7s. For English hops 1s. 9d. to 2s. is asked; a small lot of Tasmanians are moving off at 1s. 2d. to 1s. 5d. Respecting the English market on May 24, the European Mail reports:—

"A fair amount of trade is being done for the time of the year, and prices keep pretty firm for choice and best medium lots, the top price being £8 8s. per cwt., and the lowest about £2. There is no demand for the many lots of inferior hops with which the market is overstocked. Reports from the English plantations continue to be of the most favourable character."

In liquids trade is quiet; a parcel of Burnett's Old Tom, to arrive, was sold at a full figure; 11s. 9d. to 12s. is the range of quotations. Mail news to-day is to the effect that rum was firm in the London market, stocks being light. Owing to a strike among the bottle makers of Germany, the price of Geneva had pushed up from 7s. 10d. to 8s. 6d., but on the termination of the strike had fallen to 8s. 3d. The metal market is without noteworthy change. The month's shipments of galvanised iron, amounting to 742 tons, are again light, and from the 1st January had amounted to 4363 tons only, against rather over 10,000 tons for the like period last year. But the bonded stock at present, amounting to 1570 tons on Saturday last, was 568 tons in excess of the quantity at the corresponding period of last year. Including shipments on the water, however, the statistical position is better for holders than at the same period in 1888. Woolpacks, in from 5 to 20-bale lots, are moving off at 1s. 11d. Concerning the Calcutta market, under date 3rd June, Messrs. Ernsthausen and Co. write:—

"Calcutta, 3rd June, 1889.

"Jute fabrics.—The colonies continued fair buyers during the fortnight both of woolpacks and cornsacks. Of the former about 2800 bales were taken principally for June shipments at 1r. 2a. f.o.b. for 11½lb., with a few at 1r. 1a. 9p., including also a line of 500 bales various sizes and weights on the basis of association rates, July shipments for New Zealand. For cornsacks orders begin to come in more freely. Second-hands have very nearly been cleared of their June deliveries at 29r. f.o.b., and August-September at 29r. 8a. We estimate that during the fortnight fully 8000 bales have been placed, and sales for the new season are reported now at about 14,000 to 15,000 bales. Branbags are watched, but we have not heard of any fresh transactions. The market for Hessians continues very strong, America buying largely for near as well as for forward. We may expect prices to be well maintained. Our market in general shows signs of improvements, although country demand continues more or less at a standstill. Castor Oil.—In sympathy with the seed market the prices of oil have advanced. During the fortnight moderate business has passed both for Liverpool and the colonies at about our quotations. Market closes firm, and to-day's rates are for No. 2, 9r. 12a., and No. 3, 9r. 8a. Half cases, 9r. 5a. to 9r. 6a. Table Rice.—Quiet, but prices remain steady, stock being extremely small. To-day Seeta 5r. 4a.; sifted, 5r.; cleaned grass, 4r. 2a., and grass No. 1, 4r. 10a. Freights remained unchanged, but there is scarcely enough cargo available for the steamers fixed for this and next month, viz., the s.s. Bucephalus, Buncoora, Bhundara, and Nuddea, for usual Australian ports, besides a steamer for New Zealand. With large orders in hand we might get shipping orders below usual rates. Exchange has been somewhat fluctuating during the last two weeks and closes dull at 6 m's. on London 1s 4⅜d 60 days sight on the Colonies 1s. 4 17-32d."

An auction sale of overtime and seized goods will be held at the Customs-house to-morrow (Thursday), at 11 o'clock.

There had been some increase in the shipments to the colonies for the month ended May 10. Messrs. Stabbes, Straker, and Co. report that the total for the four weeks amounted to £1,797,000, the figures for the previous four weeks having been £1,564,700. But the lower figures represented the month in which the Easter week was included. About £28,500 more was shipped in the corresponding month of last year. To Sydney the shipments were valued at £548,900, an increase of £102,100 on the previous month; but a decrease of £20,800 on the corresponding month of the previous year. To Sydney the shipments comprised—Drapery, £173,100; leather and saddlery, £31,770; rails and general machinery, £41,700; gunpowder, 1210cwt.; hardware, cutlery, £39,400; galvanised iron, 742 tons; sheet lead, 146 tons; tinplates, 2635 boxes; linseed oils, 14,750 gallons; cement, 6890 barrels; tobacco, 1082cwt.; brandy in bulk, 7330 proof gallons, in case, 14,240 proof gallons; rum, 23,550 proof gallons; geneva, 6480 proof gallons; British spirits in bulk, 13,940 proof gallons, in case, 13,950 proof gallons; red wine, 10,500 gallons; white wine, 6260 gallons; beer, bulk 1352 barrels of 36 gallons, glass 3303 barrels of 36 gallons; malt, 1621 quarters; sardines, £1190; assorted oilmen's stores, £10,240; candles, 1008 cwt.; raisins, 450cwt.; currants, 1569cwt.; refined sugar, 867cwt.; white salt, 104 tons.

At the wool sales to-day competition was animated for all descriptions, the improvement in values noticed in the earlier days of the week being maintained. The following reports have been supplied:—

Goldsbrough, Mort, and Co., Limited.—Submitted to-day a catalogue of 570 bales. Competition was animated, and very full values were realised for the parcels sold, scoured bringing up to 19d., and faulty to medium conditioned greasy 7d. to 8d. per lb. Several considerable lines of scoured were bought in at prices slightly below owners' reserves, but these will no doubt be placed privately. Among the parcels sold, the following may be quoted:—Greasy: LISS, 96 bales at 8d., 20 broken fleece at 7d., 21 A lambs at 7¼d., 7 AA lambs at 8d.; CC, 16 first combing at 8d.; Winbar, 5 combing at 7¾d., 4 clothing at 7d., 4 pieces at 6¼d. Scoured: JNO over Inverell, 34 bales first combing at 19d.; RJB over Walcha, 6 clothing at 18d., 4 thirds clothing at 14¾d.; J. Johnston over Marrar Lodge, 6 firsts at 16d., 6 seconds at 13½d.; JNO over Dundee, 17 B combing at 17d.; PGN over New England, 7 A skin at 15¾d., 4 B at 12¾d.; Jones over Merrigal, 5 second pieces at 11½d., 6 stained pieces at 11½d.; AC over Byron, 7 second pieces at 13½d., 5 locks, 11½d. In all 365 bales were sold.

Mr. F. L. Barker held his usual fortnightly sale to-day, bringing forward a catalogue of 71 bales and bags. The attendance of buyers was large and biddings keen up to late rates, but as the rise in the London market was, if anything, more than discounted here previous to the news of the opening sales, no higher rates than lately given can be quoted. Prices, however, are satisfactory, and every lot found a buyer. Amongst the lots sold may be quoted:—Scoured, JB over Riverview, 16½d. for 1sts, 13d. for 2nds; WHT conjoined under Cowra Vale A, 15d. 1sts, 15d. 2nds, 13d.; Dead, 9½d.; HOY over Inverell, locks, at 8½d.; ST over Nene, A at 16d. 1sts, skin 15½d. Greasy, JXN over Pulputtor, 18 bales from 3½d. for locks, to 7¾d. for 1st fleeces per lb.

The warden at Millparinka has sent a report to the Mines Department, dealing with the alleged discovery of gold at Korringberry Range on Wannaminta run. The report states that the quartz is of a dark grey appearance, intermixed with iron stone. Gold is visible throughout the stone, and there are also indications of copper. Galena also shows strongly. As yet no shaft had been sunk, and the stone is on the surface or got at a depth of 2 or 3ft. The assay from 4 or 5 lb. of stone gave 4oz. to the ton. The gold was discovered by a man named Sports, who has been prospecting the locality for about 16 months. There is a prospect of the quartz turning out payable, but until a crushing has tested it no definite opinion can be formed.

MELBOURNE, WEDNESDAY.

A fair extent of business was done to-day. Silver shares were a shade easier, and lower prices were accepted. Central Broken Hill, New North Junction, South, South Extended, British Broken Hill, and Round Hill were largely dealt in at rising prices, but eased again to the opening rates. Victoria Cross changed hands to good extent at advanced quotations. Very little business was done in gold stocks, but Black Horse United and Working Miners sold lower. Baker's Creek were taken at higher prices.

BROKEN HILL, WEDNESDAY.

At the Central Mine the ends of the drive at the 300ft. level are now 215ft. apart, and still continue in high-class ore. The north end is particularly rich in native silver, and oxide of silver showing freely throughout the stone. In the north end carbonate of lead continues to come in near the floor of the drive. The north winze at the 200ft. level is down 48ft. Oxidised material underlies the galena, and shows chloride and native silver. Assays give up to 86oz. Some galena is still in the winze, but it is expected to cut out in a few feet. The main north drive on the same level is 700ft. from the shaft, in a highly favourable lode. The material prospects of the mine continue to improve. In the South Mine the drive north and south at 230ft. level from the bottom of No. 3 winze, trial shaft, is said to be looking remarkably well. The best ore yet broken is now being obtained.

PARKES, WEDNESDAY.

The Parkes Quartz-crushing Company, at a meeting held yesterday, declared a dividend of £3 per £10 share. There is nothing fresh from Bachelor's. The ground is reported to be patchy in that locality. Quayle and company are raising splendid stone, and have about 130 tons at grass. The Robinson claim at Caledonia Hill will be the next through at the Parkes Quartz Company's battery, with a big lot.

MANAGERS' REPORTS.

One-Tree Cordillera Silver-mining Company, No Liability, June 22.—147ft. level, crosscut extended 3ft. 6in., quartz more broken up, not so compact, but fully 3ft. wide, and opening out wider. A shoot of quartz coming up from under foot of a more compact nature on south side of drive. On the whole, it is looking better, and highly mineralised. Ground much easier for driving.

Pye's Creek Silver-mining Company, Limited, June 22.—The lode is improving, a new and strong vein of galena ore making on the hanging-wall side, quite free from zinc blende. The ground also blasts better lately. The distance sunk for the week is 4ft. 6in., making the total 260ft.

Barn Silver-mining Company, Limited, June 22.—The winze has been sunk 7ft., making the total 61ft. 6in., and have raised three or four tons of ore. The lode is 2ft. wide and running about the same direction, and looks much better; are still going down on the same wall we started.

The Lubra Silver-mining Company, No Liability, June 22.—Rose 2ft. in roof of drive, and drove 2ft.; total from underlie shaft 41ft. 6in. There is a formation of lode 2ft. from wall to wall, and the walls look well defined. The lode consists of ironspar, calcspar, yellow gossan, and antimonial sulphides and shades of kaolin ore intermixed.

MEETINGS.

PARLIAMENTARY STANDING COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC WORKS.

The weekly meeting of the Parliamentary Standing Committee on Public Works was held yesterday afternoon in the committee room at the Public Works Department. There were present Mr. J. P. Abbott (president), the Hons. J. Lackey, Dr. Garran, F. T. Humphery, Jas. Watson, W. J. Trickett, Ms.L.C., and Messrs. Copeland, Dowel, Tonkin, Garrard, and O'Sullivan.

THE LATE HON. J. SUTHERLAND.

Mr. LACKEY said that before the committee proceeded to business he felt it his duty to call attention to a lamentable circumstance that had occurred since their last meeting, and that was the death of one of their number, the Hon. John Sutherland, a gentleman who had occupied a prominent place in the political history of the colony. All the members of the committee heard of his death with deep feelings of regret. They should mark their sense of loss at his removal. The deceased gentleman in the whole course of his public life had ever been actuated by the one desire of doing his best for the advancement of the country. He would therefore move,—"That the Parliamentary Standing Committee on Public Works desire to record with deep feelings of regret the death of the Hon. John Sutherland, one of the members of the committee, and that the secretary be instructed to convey with the resolutions their feelings of condolence with Mrs. Sutherland."

Mr. GARRARD seconded the motion, saying that younger men in political life would always have a bright example before them in the life of the hon. gentleman who had so recently passed away.

The motion was agreed to. The committee further decided that on their rising, and in view of the funeral of the late Mr. Sutherland being fixed for the following day, they would not meet again until Wednesday of next week. It was also determined that the members of the committee should attend the funeral as a body of which the late hon. gentleman was a member, and the members will therefore assemble at the Public Works Department for that purpose at from half-past 1 until a quarter to 2 this afternoon.

RICHMOND RIVER ENTRANCE.

The board decided to take evidence on the proposed improvements to the Richmond River entrance, plans being exhibited showing the works proposed by Sir J. Coode. These works, summarised from Sir John Coode's report, are to fix the channel, and to regulate its width, so that the scour may be confined to a definite track of proper proportions, instead of its useful effects being partially lost as at present, in opening fresh channels, and in the removal and cutting through of the sandspits; to neutralise the obstruction to the ebb and flood currents offered by the Beacon Rocks; to prevent the conflict of the waters from the North Creek with those from the main river; and to so devise the works that the cost of the first instalment of the undertaking might, if possible, be brought within the sum which would be available, indicating, however, the character of extensions to be executed hereafter when justified by the requirements of trade, and when more perfect accommodation was demanded. Necessary works for this end were the construction of the south training bank, which should be the first work. It would commence at the bight on the southern margin of the river, nearly opposite to the eastern end of West Ballina, and proceed therefrom towards the western face of the south spit. The total length of the bank would be 4500ft., and it would be formed of rubble stone, brought up to, say, 6ft. above high-water of ordinary spring tides. The primary object was to prevent the cutting by freshets of a channel through the south spit, where passages had been formed on three occasions within the last 30 years. The bank would also create a true run for the currents, the main force of the ebb being diverted from the sharp angle in the bight near the inner and weak portion of the south spit. Such a bank would effectually protect the south spit from the scouring effect of river freshets, and sand might be expected to accumulate at the back or seaward side, thus securing the permanence and continuity of the spit. The second stage in the operations, after the completion of the south training bank, would be the construction of a north breakwater from the pilot station across the deep-water channel, thence over the south-west flank or beacon rock and seaward in a direction about east south-east. The total length of the first instalment of the arm would be 2500ft. When the lastnamed work had been completed for a length of 1200ft., the south breakwater should be commenced in continuation of the south training bank on a curve of 1600ft. radius, the works on the north and south sides being thereafter carried on simultaneously. Upon the completion of that bank, the breakwaters, and a guide bank, a new channel might be expected to be formed and permanently maintained by scour to the westward of the south spit, and a fixed depth of 12ft. in that channel at low water of spring tides might be confidently looked for. It was also proposed to light and buoy the channel. The proposed guide bank would measure 2000ft. in length at the mouth of North Creek. That bank would be constructed of rubble stone deposits à pierres perdues, the top of the mound being 4ft. above the level of high water of spring tides. The estimated cost of the proposed works was—South training bank, 4500ft. long, £43,800; south breakwater, 2000ft. long, £32,800; north breakwater, 2500ft. long, £48,300; guide bank, 2000ft. long, £9600; and lighting and buoying the channel, £1500; total cost of first instalment of works, £136,000. The works proposed would create a fixed and permanent entrance channel, in which there should be a depth of from 16ft. to 17ft. at high water of spring tides. During and after freshets there would be a much greater depth than that, and such increase would be maintained for a longer period than under existing conditions. An absolutely perfect entrance could not be expected from the action of breakwaters of the comparatively short lengths of those proposed. Some irregularities in depth might be looked for upon the completion of the works, consequent upon sand being driven into the channel from the southward. The only complete remedy would be found in the extension of the arms. Those extensions could be executed at any future time when the requirements of the trade were such as to justify the additional outlay. His aim had been not so much to provide perfect accommodation in the first instance, although that would have been done if possible, as to bring the first expenditure within reasonable limits and such as might be approved under the circumstances, indicating the nature of the additions to be made hereafter, if and when desired. The cost of the two extensions, as shown on the drawings, would be—prolongation of the south breakwater for a length of 2000ft., £100,000; prolongation of the north breakwater for a similar length, £90,000; or a total outlay for the whole scheme complete of £326,000.

Mr. Barling, the Under-Secretary for Public Works, gave evidence by reading a prepared statement, which repeated the chief points of the scheme as proposed by Sir John Coode. In addition, he said that as far back as 1861 the Engineer-in-Chief submitted an estimate of what would be the cost of carrying on the Richmond River entrance improvement works. That estimate was something like £500,000. Since then a considerable amount of attention had been bestowed upon the matter, the latest development being Sir John Coode's report and estimate of the cost of the works. The present population of the district tapped by the river in question was 22,000 souls, the increase since the year 1880 having been at the rate of 11¼ per cent. per annum, while the total increase of population in the whole colony had been 4½ per cent. per annum. The number of vessels passing the bar in 1888 was, sailing 208, steamers 200, with a total tonnage of 96,400 tons. The number of passengers for the same period was 11,500. The wrecks that had taken place since 1879 had resulted in a loss of more than £24,000, and that sum did not represent the total loss, inasmuch as large sums of money had been expended on repairing vessels which had sustained damage in entering and leaving the port. In 1888 the sum of £50,000 had been placed on the Loan Estimates towards carrying out the suggested improvements.

Mr. Darley, Engineer-in-Chief of the Harbours and Rivers Department, gave evidence, stating that he generally agreed with Sir John Coode's plan and design for the proposed improvements. He fully explained the plan on view, adding that Sir John Coode's opinion was that the training wall on the south should be constructed first. He (Mr. Darley), however, would recommend that the piece of wall extending from the Beacon Rocks to the headland at the pilot station, on the north bank, should be first constructed owing to the shifting of the channel which had taken place, and for which Sir John Coode did not reckon. He had prepared an estimate, which was higher than that of Sir John Coode's, but which, at the same time, was wonderfully in accord with it, the chief difference being that Sir John Coode estimated that the total cost of the first instalment of works would be £136,000, and his estimate for the same was £148,000. From a professional point of view he was of opinion that the improvements would be a complete work if carried out as suggested. If his department had prepared a design he believed it would have been of a similar character to that submitted, except that he would have gradually raised the breakwaters from 6ft. at the headland to 16ft. as they neared their eastward extremities. He considered the proposed improvements an urgent work, which would be well worth the proposed expenditure. The proposed heightening of the breakwater might possibly entail the expenditure of an additional £20,000. The material for the walls could be obtained from a quarry about 18 miles up the river, where there is an ample supply of stone. In his opinion the construction of a railway would not be as valuable to the district as the provision of efficient navigation of the river. From his general knowledge he believed the works could be carried on without impeding navigation. A reasonable time to complete the whole of the work would be between six and seven years.

At this stage the committee adjourned until 2 o'clock on Wednesday next, when Mr. Darley will be recalled for further cross-examination.

The monthly meeting of the Temperance Society was held at St. John's School, Parramatta, on Monday evening, and was largely attended. Archdeacon Günther occupied the chair, and in addition to some good vocal and instrumental music, recitations were given by some of the younger members under the direction of Mr. Wicks. The chairman delivered an address during the evening on "Remedies and Counter Attractions," in the course of which he expressed a hope that temperance movements would be followed up by practical work. He thought that good coffee taverns in every town of the colony, where people could get, besides refreshments, music, games, society, and outdoor amusements, would make temperance work permanent, and be a standing evidence of practical Christianity.

A meeting was held last night in the board-room of St. Joseph's Building Society, Elizabeth-street, for the purpose of completing the arrangements for the reception of Dr. Higgins, Auxiliary Bishop of Sydney, who is a passenger by the Orient steamer Austral, which is expected to arrive here this morning. The Hon. D. O'Connor presided. After some discussion the meeting resolved itself into a committee to draft an address, which will be presented to Dr. Higgins by Sir Patrick Jennings. The steam launch Premier will leave the Man-of-War Stairs at half-past 9 o'clock, and steam down the harbour to meet the Austral on entering Port Jackson.

A WONDERFUL MEDICINE.

BEECHAM'S PILLS BEECHAM'S PILLS BEECHAM'S PILLS

are universally admitted to be worth a Guinea a Box for Bilious and Nervous Disorders, such as Wind and Pain in the Stomach, Sick Headache, Giddiness, Fulness and Swelling after Meals, Dizziness and Drowsiness, Cold Chills, Flushings of Heat, Loss of Appetite, Shortness of Breath, Costiveness, Scurvy and Blotches on the Skin, Disturbed Sleep, Frightful Dreams, and all Nervous and Trembling Sensations, &c. The first dose will give relief in twenty minutes. This is no fiction, for they have done it in countless cases.

Every sufferer is earnestly invited to try One Box of these Pills, and they will be acknowledged to be WORTH A GUINEA A BOX. WORTH A GUINEA A BOX. WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.

For females of all ages they are invaluable. No female should be without them. There is not a medicine to be found equal to them for removing any obstruction or irregularity of the system. If taken according to the directions given with each box, they will soon restore females of all ages to sound and robust health. This has been proved by thousands who have tried them and found the benefits which are ensured by their use.

BEECHAM'S PILLS. BEECHAM'S PILLS. BEECHAM'S PILLS.

For a weak stomach, impaired digestion, and all disorders of the liver, they act like magic, and a few doses will be found to work wonders on the most important organs in the human machine. They strengthen the whole muscular system, restore the long-lost complexion, bring back the keen edge of appetite, and arouse into action with the rosebud of health the whole physical energy of the human frame. These are facts testified continually by members of all classes of society, and one of the best guarantees to the nervous and debilitated is, BEECHAM'S PILLS HAVE the LARGEST SALE of any patent medicine in the world.

BEECHAM'S MAGIC COUGH PILLS. BEECHAM'S MAGIC COUGH PILLS. BEECHAM'S MAGIC COUGH PILLS.

As a remedy for Coughs in general, Asthma, Bronchial Affections, Hoarseness, Shortness of Breath, Tightness, and Oppression of the Chest, &c., these Pills stand unrivalled. They are the best ever offered to the public, and will speedily remove that sense of oppression and difficulty of breathing which nightly deprives the patient of rest. Let any person give BEECHAM'S COUGH PILLS a trial, and the most violent cough will in a short time be removed.

Prepared only, and sold wholesale and retail, by the proprietor, THOMAS BEECHAM, St. Helens, Lancashire, England; and by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Vendors everywhere.
